Here is the story of every detailed play in the third game between the Giants and Athletics for the world's championship, telegraphed play by play from the Polo Grounds, New York, exclusively to the Boston AMERICAN.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

The most celebrated baseball writer in America.

FIRST HALF FIRST INNING—Mathewson put over a fast one for a strike. Lord fouled a curve. After he fouled he trotted a slow one past Mathewson, but was thrown out at first by Doyle. Oldring hit a fierce bounder straight to Fletcher, who came up with it and threw him out. Collins rolled a slow one to Mathewson, who tossed him out at first on a close play. NO RUNS, NO HIT, NO ERRORS.

LAST HALF FIRST INNING—Devore struck out for the fifth time in succession. Doyle hit an easy bounder to Davis, who trotted to first ahead of him. Snodgrass took two strikes without offering at a ball, then struck out at a fast one high and inside. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF, SECOND INNING—Baker cracked the first ball sharply to Doyle who made a neat stop and tossed him out. Baker quit running as if lame. Murphy smashed a fierce line drive over third and Herzog made a leaping catch that set the crowd wild. They were hitting Matty viciously, but the Giants seemed to have a bale of horse shoes. Davis hit a long fly to Snodgrass. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

LAST HALF, SECOND INNING—Murray hit a rather easy fly to Lord in left. Merkle fouled off two, then bounded to Barry, who shot him out easily. Herzog looked like a joke, swinging at Coombs's speed, and struck out. NO RUNS. NO HITS.

FIRST HALF THIRD INNING—Barry tore off the first hit of the game, a line single to left near the foul line. He stole second on the first ball pitched but the Giant horse shoe proved good. Lapp smashed a line drive straight into Doyle's hands and Barry was doubled off second, Doyle to Fletcher. Coombs popped out to Doyle back of second. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

LAST HALF, THIRD INNING—Fletcher hit a line fly to Murphy in short. Meyers hit fiercely down the third base [illegible] that Baker could not handle it. Mathewson smashed a line single against the right field wall, sending Meyers around to third. Devore hit sharply to Barry, who fumbled just long enough to let Meyers score, but got the ball up in time to force Matty at second. Devore tried to steal and was out, Lapp to Barry, who dived into him and tagged him out. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

FIRST HALF, FOURTH INNING—Lord hit far and hard to centre, but Snodgrass was waiting under the ball and caught it. Oldring hit on the end of his bat and popped out to Fletcher. Collins fouled two off, then hit down the third base line and beat Herzog's throw to first, Herzog making a nice play. Collins stole second cleanly, sliding under Fletcher, although Meyers threw well. Matty leaped and jerked down Baker's high bounder with one hand and tossed him out at first. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

LAST HALF, FOURTH INNING—Doyle hit a ball outside the plate and bounced an easy one to Collins, who tossed him out. Snodgrass hit the first ball and flied easily to Lord. Murray smashed a high easy fly to Murphy. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF, FIFTH INNING—Murphy hit sharply and straight at Herzog, who fumbled and let him reach first. Davis's hard bounder hit Connolly, broke through and rolled to short, giving Davis a base hit. Barry poked down a perfect sacrifice, Mathewson to Merkle, putting runners on third and second. Lapp bounded an easy one to Matty, who tossed to Meyers and cut off Murphy. Herzog got the ball and chased Murphy to the plate, catching and tagging him as he slid. Coombs popped to Fletcher. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

LAST HALF, FIFTH INNING—Lord went back near the bleachers and captured Merkle's long fly. Herzog drew the first pass of the game, Coombs being a trifle wild. Herzog stole second, but slid over the bag and was called out before he could drop back, Collins taking the throw. Fletcher rolled a fast one to Barry and went out at first. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF, SIXTH INNING—Lord smashed a terrific line drive which Murray caught in right. Oldring struck out on slow curves. Collins hit a line fly to Snodgrass. NO RUNS. NO HITS.

When Baker Walloped That Home Run in the Ninth

LAST HALF SIXTH INNING—Meyers lofted a tall foul which Lapp caught near the Athletic's bench. Mathewson shoved up an easy fly which Collins caught on top of second base. Devore bounded easily to Baker who tossed him out. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF, SEVENTH INNING—Baker hit a ball a foot over his head and Murray caught his long fly against the right field wall. Murphy popped out to Doyle near second. Mathewson was putting on more steam and was effective, striking out Davis to finish it. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

LAST HALF, SEVENTH INNING—Doyle rolled an easy bounder to Collins and retired at first. Snodgrass struck out again. Murray walked, one of the four balls being palpably miscalled. Murray tried to steal, although thrown out. Collins dropped the ball. Merkle hit sharply to Collins and was out at first. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF EIGHTH INNING—Barry tore a double down the left field line. Lapp rolled a slow bounder to Fletcher and outraced the throw to first, putting Barry on third. Coombs fouled a hard one past third. Coombs hit to Doyle and Barry was nailed at the plate in a close play, sliding into Meyers' hands as the ball came home. Lord hit sharply to Doyle, who tossed for the double play and Fletcher muffed. Lapp blundered around third and was out at the plate, Fletcher to Meyers to Herzog. Oldring struck out. NO RUNS.

LAST HALF EIGHTH INNING—Herzog hit a hard line fly to Lord. Barry made the greatest play of the series, cutting off a base hit for Fletcher and throwing him out. Meyers struck out, swinging foolishly at Coombs' curves. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF NINTH INNING—Collins bounded an easy one to Herzog and was tossed out. Baker tied the score with a home run drive into the rightfieldstands. Murphy drove one fiercely over third and reached second, but Brennan called it foul and sent him back. Then Herzog fumbled Murphy's bounder and threw wild over first, letting him reach second. Davis rolled one just inside the plate and Meyers threw him out, putting Murphy on third. Crandall went out to warm up. Barry out, Herzog to Merkle. ONE RUN, ONE HIT.

LAST HALF, NINTH INNING—Mathewson was out on strikes. Devore popped to Baker. Doyle struck out. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF, TENTH INNING—Lapp was out on a close decision, Fletcher to Merkle. Coombs popped to Doyle. Lord out, Fletcher to Merkle. NO RUNS NO HITS

LAST HALF, TENTH INNING—Snodgrass allowed a ball to hit him, but Brennan refused to let him walk. Snodgrass walked and jeered Coombs. Murray sacrificed, Coombs to Davis. Snodgras was out trying to reach third on a short passed ball. He leaped at Baker again, deliberately spiking him. The crowd roared and hissed and cheered Baker when he went back to the base. Merkle walkd. Merkle out trying to steal, Lapp to Collins. NO. RUNS, NO HITS.

FIRST HALF, ELEVENTH INNING—Oldring out, Herzog to Merkle. Collins singled into left centre. Baker beat out a slow bounder to third and the ball got away from Merkle and let the runners land on second and third. Fletcher fumbled Murphy's bounder and Collins scored. Baker reached third. Davis singled to right, scoring Baker. Murphy out at third, Murray to Herzog. Davis out stealing. Meyers to Doyle. TWO RUNS, THREE HITS.

LAST HALF, ELEVENTH INNING—Herzog doubled against the left field fence. Fletcher flied to Lord. Meyers out, Collins to Davis. Becker batted for Mathewson, Collins fumbled Becker's bounder and let Herzog score. Becker out stealing, Lapp to Collins. ONE RUN, ONE HIT.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX WRITES OF THE FUTURE.

A deeply interesting article which everyone who has ever read her articles in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN will not want to miss appears in SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

WOMAN RIGID AS A STONE

A well dressed woman was taken to the City Hospital to-day from a fruit store on Washington street who had in a moment, apparently, become speechless and as rigid in body as though she were turned into a marble statue.

It is one of the most remarkable cases the doctors of the hospital ever saw. She was placed in the psycopathic ward for observation.

The woman walked into the fruit store at No. 1085 Washington street. She said nothing. She was accompanied by a boy. The woman wrote a note and handed it to the boy. The boy left. Still the woman had not uttered a word.

The action of the woman by this time had attracted the attention of those in the store. They noted that she was well dressed and that she bore evidence of being a woman of education.

As If Turned to Stone.

Suddenly it looked as though she were turned to stone. There was a glassy expression in her eyes, her body appeared to harden and she stood like a statue. The people in the store became excited. A young man approached the woman.

"What is the matter, lady?" he asked. "Are you ill—is there anything I can do for you?"

The woman made no sign that she heard what was said to her.

The proprietor of the store was called. He walked up to the woman, who stood straight, her arms at her side, her eyes looking apparently straight in front of her and seeing nothing.

"Can I do anything for you—can't you speak?" asked the perturbed proprietor.

"The woman is in a trance," remarked one of those in the store.

BAKER BREAKS UP GAME WITH 2D HOME RUN

By R. W. LARDNER.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 17.—The most exciting game ever played in a world's series was won by the Athletics, 3 to 2, in eleven innings. Every fair-minded fan was glad that the game went as it did, for the Giants played dirty ball and tried to steal the victory.

Jack Coombs and Frank Baker were the heroes of the game, the former pitching one of the best games of his career, and Baker making Philadelphia's triumph possible with one of his great home run drives, after his team looked hopelessly beaten.

FIRST INNING.

Athletics—After getting two strikes, Lord pushed a slow roller to the left of Mathewson. Matty touched it and Doyle, coming in fast, scooped up the ball and threw to Merkle for the out. Oldring missed two curved balls, then he hit a fast one on the ground to Fletcher and was thrown out at first. Collins hit the second ball pitched to Merkle. Mathewson covered the bag and got the put-out. It was a pretty play on Matty's part. NO RUNS.

Giants—Devore struck out on two fast balls and a curve, fouling the second one and missing the last one. Doyle hit the first ball pitched to Davis, who put him out unassisted. Snodgrass struck out on a fast one up past his ear. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

Athletics—Baker was given a warm reception by the crowd when he came to bat. Baker hit the second ball pitched hard on the ground toward right. Doyle made a pretty stop and threw him out to Merkle. Murphy caught a fast ball squarely on the nose and it looked like a double to left, but Herzog jumped up and pulled it in. Davis hit a curve ball for a high fly to Snodgrass. NO RUNS.

Giants—With one strike and one ball on Murray, he sent a fly to Lord. Merkle's grounder was easy for Barry, who had plenty of time for the throw to Davis. Herzog fanned on two curves and a fast one. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

Athletics—Matty pitched badly to Barry and the batter pulled a curve to left for a clean single. On an attempt at the hit-and-run play, Lapp missed a swing and Barry stole second. Lapp hit the next ball savagely on a line to Doyle whose quick throw to Fletcher doubled Barry off second. It was the first double play of the series. Coombs got three balls and two strikes and then flied to Doyle after hitting four fouls. NO RUNS.

Giants—Fletcher hit the first ball pitched for a fly to Murphy. Meyers hit a fast single that Baker blocked, but could not hold. Mathewson caught a fast one off-side and sent it over the ground for a single, Meyers racing to third. Devore sent one on the ground to Barry, who fumbled, but recovered in time to toss to Collins forcing Mathewson, but Meyers scored on the play. Devore tried to steal on the next ball and was nailed, Lapp to Barry. ONE RUN.

FOURTH INNING.

Athletics—Lord hit a fast one far into right centre, Snodgrass catching it after a hard run. Oldring popped up the second ball pitched for a fly to Fletcher back of second base. With the count two and two on him, Collins sent a high bounder to Herzog, and beat it out by fast sprinting. On the second strike to Baker, Collins made a clean steal of second. Fletcher and Doyle kicked, but could make no impression on Tommy Connolly. With two and two on Baker, Matty pitched a high fast one, just the kind Frank likes, but the best he could do with it was to hit a high bounder which Matty stabbed with his gloved hand and threw to Merkle in plenty of time. NO RUNS.

Giants—Doyle got two strikes and one ball and was out on a grounder to Collins. Snodgrass hit the first ball for a high fly to Lord. Murray hit with two balls and nothing and was out on a fly to Murphy. NO RUNS.

FIFTH INNING.

Athletics—With two and two, Murphy sent a fast grounder to Herzog and was safe on Charley's fumble. Davis hit the second ball pitched toward Doyle, but the ball hit Umpire Connolly on the leg and went for a single, Murphy stopping at second. Barry sacrificed, Matty to Merkle. After striking at two low curve balls, Lapp hit a slow bounder to Matty. Murphy was caught between third and home and run down, Matty to Meyers to Herzog, Davis going to third and Lapp to second. Coombs struck at a curve and then popped a fly to Fletcher. NO RUNS.

Giants—Merkle hit the first ball pitched for a long fly which Lord got against the left field fence. Herzog waited for two and three and then walked. Herzog had second easily stolen, but overslid the bag and was out, Lapp to Collins. Fletcher waited for two and three, and was thrown out, Barry to Davis. NO RUNS.

SIXTH INNING.

Athletics—Lord caught a fast one on the nose and lined to Murray. Oldring struck out on three curved balls. Collins met a fast one inside and pulled a fly to Snodgrass. NO RUNS.

Giants—With two strikes and three balls Meyers lifted a high foul to Lapp. Mathewson hit the second ball pitched for a fly to Collins. Devore had Coombs in a hole, but grounded out, Baker to Davis. NO RUNS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Athletics—Baker hit what was almost a wild pitch for a fly to Murray. Murphy hit the second ball pitched for a fly to Doyle. Davis struck out on two curve balls and one fast one. NO RUNS.

Giants—Doyle went out on a fast grounder, Collins to Davis. Snodgrass fanned on two fast ones and a curve. Murray walked on four consecutive balls. Murray went down on the first ball and would have been out but Collins dropped Lapp's perfect throw. Merkle hit the next one on the ground and was out, Collins to Davis. NO RUNS.

EIGHTH INNING.

Athletics—Barry pulled a fast ball on a line to left for two bases. Lapp hit the first ball for a slow bounder to Fletcher and beat it out, Barry going to third. Coombs fouled one off and then sent a bounder to Doyle on which Barry was out at the plate, Doyle to Meyers. Barry made a desperate slide, but was blocked off. Lord hit the first ball pitched to Doyle. It looked like an easy double play, but Fletcher dropped the throw and Coombs was safe at second. Lapp tried to score on the play and was caught, Doyle to Meyers to Herzog. Coombs stopping at second and Lord at first. Oldring struck out on three curved balls. This inning was full of excitement and was a narrow escape for Mathewson. NO RUNS.

Giants—Herzog lined to Lord. For the first time in the series Fletcher made a bid for a hit, but Barry made a corking stop and threw him out. Meyers struck out on three curved balls. NO RUNS.

NINTH INNING.

Athletics—Collins went out, Herzog to Merkle. Baker hit in the right field stand for a home run. Murphy hit to Herzog, who fumbled and then threw wild past Merkle, Murphy taking second. Davis hit in front of the plate and was out, Meyers to Merkle, Murphy taking third. Barry was out, Herzog to Merkle. ONE RUN.

Giants—Matty was called out on strikes, three fast ones coming over after he had three balls. Devore popped a fly to Baker. Doyle struck out on three fast ones. NO RUNS.

TENTH INNING.

Athletics—Lapp was out on a grounder, Fletcher to Merkle. Coombs hit the second ball pitched for a short fly to Doyle. Lord hit the first ball and was easy, Fletcher to Merkle. NO RUNS

Gians—On the first ball Coombs pitched Snodgrass, he threw up his elbow and tried to get hit. It was so plainly intentional that Umpire Brennan refused to allow him to walk. The Giants raised a howl on the play, but it did them no good. Snodgrass then got a base on balls without one strike. Murray sacrificed, Coombs to Davis. Snodgrass tried to go to third on a short passed ball, and was out, Lapp to Baker. He jumped into Baker with both feet and cut Frank's arm. The Athletics were mad all through, and it looked for a minute as if it would be a fight, but the umpires butted in and stopped the argument. Snodgrass has been playing dirty ball all through the series. Merkle walked. Merkle was out stealing, Lapp to Collins. The Giants kicked hard on this, McGraw getting particularly offensive. NO RUNS.

ELEVENTH INNING.

Athletics—Oldring [illegible] and was out [illegible] to Merkle. [illegible] hit a fast ball [illegible] Baker beat out [illegible] Collins [illegible] [illegible] Fletcher [illegible] Baker [illegible] [illegible] stealing, Meyers to [illegible]

Giants—[illegible] out stealing, Lapp to Collins. [illegible] RUN.

SUFFRAGISTS SCORE POINT ON FROTHINGHAM

The suffragist party beat Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham's party to Reading to-day and while parading up and down the main street of the town, for the first time distributed green fliers, adding this color to the former ones of pink and yellow. A few minutes after the suffragist party arrived at Reading, Frothingham's party reached the town from Wilmington, and the gubernatorial candidate and Mr. Luce made short addresses to a fairly good sized crowd. Miss Foley and Miss Carpenter both made addresses, but not until the stumping party had left for Wakefield.

Earlier in the day Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and his party stopped at Harriman's tannery at North Wilmington and a few of the more prominent members of the party went through the place. Some of the employes when asked to stop work by the management and shake hands with Mr. Frothingham refused to do so, while others complied with the request.

Luce Wants to Know.

During his address at Reading Mr. Luce said that he wanted to ask Governor Foss this question, "Do you agree with former Governor Douglas that the railroads are so harassed by law that they cannot develop as they should?"

Using the same machine they had in the Berkshires and the same chauffeur, "Clarence," Miss Margaret Foley and the others in the suffragist party kept after the Frothingham spellbinders on their tour of Middlesex County.

The close pursuit the women maintained to-day indicated, it was declared, that they intend to heckle the Frothingham contingent more than ever. This morning but one speech was made, and that by Miss Alice Carpenter, to whom Chief Heckler Foley seemed content to hand the laurels for the time being. This was at Woburn. The suffragists scattered their "flyers" among the slender groups of voters. Their innovation for the day was the use of pink posters, bearing the inscriptions of "Women in the Home." These were handed out along with the usual yellow bills.

Small Republican Crowds.

The Suffragists were just as warmly received as were the Republicans, and sometimes even more so. It was very apparent that the Middlesex voters were on the lookout for the women, and when the latter appeared they were applauded and frequently they were cheered. Nowhere did the Frothingham speakers attract a crowd of any size. At Burlington there weren't a dozen men all told in the gathering, and Frothingham spent most of his time shaking hands with the school children, who were there enjoying their recess.

The Republicans opened up their fire at Winchester at 9:30 o'clock. Along were Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Robert Luce, Alexander McGregor, candidate for the Governor's Council; Senator Frank P. Bennett of Saugus, and Representative A. E. Bliss of Malden, who was in charge of the trip. On the program were nine towns and four cities of the county. In the suffragist car were Miss Foley, Miss Carpenter and Miss M. Gay.

At Winchester there were less than fifty men in the square. At Woburn, the next stopping place, the suffragists were applauded by a crowd of seventy-five men. They stopped within fifty yards of the Republican contingent, and Miss Carpenter made her speech. On the road while traveling, the suffragists never got out of the dust kicked up by the Republican autos, and were never more than 10 yards in the rear.

Lonely at Burlington.

It was announced from the suffragist car that the women would not give out any interviews to newspaper men until their day's work was over. They preferred to wait, they said, so they could sum up and tell of all the things they had accomplished on the tour.

In Burlington, somehow or other, three horses were scared. Behind one of them were two women in a carriage. Quick work on the part of pedestrians prevented a couple of runaways. The Republicans laid the horse fright to the yellow pennants flying from the pursuing automobile.

There was but one man to meet the spellbinders at Burlington. He was Chairman James McLaughlin of the town committee. Half a dozen emerged from a nearby blacksmith shop and another came to fill out about a dozen.

Playing near the school were nearly a hundred boys and girls. Miss Violet Twining, principal of the school, after being introduced to the Republican leaders, ding-donged her handbell and assembled the children.

"I want the children to shake hands with the man who is almost certain to be the next Governor of Massachusetts," said Senator Bennett by way of introduction at the school. The children trooped up and Frothingham shook hands all around.

BERLE CITES CASE OF BOSTON REFORMER

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 17.—Professor A. A. Berle of Tufts College, in discussing the moral perplexities of the American people before the Rhode Island Baptist Union, cited a Boston instance. He said: "In Boston, for example, a prominent man of high personal character and repute, a gentleman even discussed as a possible president of Harvard University, was a reform candidate for Mayor. This same gentleman is now under federal indictment for criminal offence. The average man must be adjudged much more stupid than he is if anybody supposes that he is not asking which of these two characters is his real one."

KENNETH HILL IN COURT TODAY

Kenneth P. Hill, the young Harvard square printer who eloped last Summer with Miss Ida Graustein, daughter of W. A. Graustein, the Cambridge milk contractor, and who was later indicted for perjury by the Middlesex County grand jury, was in the Cambridge District Court to-day before Judge Almy in the role of a complainant.

Soon after the young couple were married Hill's father-in-law made a perjury complaint against him, which resulted in the indictment.

This morning Hill alleged that Frank Howard, a Cambridge florist, had assaulted him. The scene of the alleged assault was in "Rammy's" rathskeller, an eating place popular with the Harvard students. The cause of the trouble was the charge preferred against Hill by his angry father-in-law. Hill testified that Howard called him several names and finally struck him. Howard denied striking Hill. Two waiters in the place stated that there was not much to the trouble, but that when it was over both Hill and Howard were covered with the cheese from sandwiches that they had been eating. Judge Almy found Howard not guilty.

DOUBLE OFFER HELPS READERS

Thousands of dolls and thousands of cook books were given out yesterday, and on account of the big demand, the AMERICAN to-day makes a specially good offer. It doubles the offer in order to simplify matters and make it easier for its readers. The double offer is this—If you wish both the doll and the cook book, bring in one set of fifteen coupons of consecutive dates, and 90 cents.

The doll is 17½ inches long, with jointed arms and legs and a beautiful moveable head. Thousands of little children are going to be delighted on Christmas with these handsome dolls. The doll is beautifully dressed in a satine gown, trimmed with lace and ribbon. It has on real shoes and stockings and a large picture hat trimmed with flowers. Do you know of a child who would not be delighted with one of these handsome presents?

And Lowney's latest cook book, which cannot be bought anywhere for less than $1.25, is offered for fifteen coupons of consecutive date, and forty-five cents. This book is by Maria Willett Howard, formerly principal of the Boston Cooking School, and covers every branch of cookery. There are 1,450 receipts and 421 pages in this magnificent cook book, which is a necessity in every home in New England.

Locomobile

1912 SIX

Why It Is The Easiest Riding Car In The World.

The 1912 Locomobile Six is the Easiest Riding Car in the World, and for the following reasons. Scientific balance of weight, which enables the car to hold the road; produces steady riding, and minimizes skidding. Three-quarter elliptic rear springs, which are perfectly free to act, as the driving is done through distance rods and not through the rear springs. Soft-acting multiple disc clutch, which enables the car to be started smoothly and without any jerking. Long wheel base. Ten Inch Upholstery, which absorbs shock and vibration and makes it unnecessary to slow down for cross walks and rough places in the roads.

INJUNCTION ON STOCK ISSUED

John W. O'Mealey, a broker at No. 53 State street, to-day brought a bill in equity against Robert H. Putnam of Boston to reach and apply certain stocks which the latter holds toward the payment of an alleged debt of $3,612.00.

O'Mealey charges that Putnam purchased stocks to that amount through his office but has not paid for them.

He also seeks an injunction against Putnam's brother, Walter, to restrain him from disposing of any of the stocks in question. Temporary injunctions were issued against the Putnam brothers by Judge Jenney.

ONE-HALF BOTTLE OF THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY ACCOMPLISHES WONDERS

When I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, I was in great distress day and night. Before I received sample by mail, I went to our best doctor (and he is second to none in this vicinity) and told him how I felt. He put me up a bottle of medicine. I was about a week taking the medicine, but was no better than when I began. I then began your sample bottle, and before I got through with it, I felt a change. The scalding sensation did not bother only a few times in the middle of the day. I would not have believed such a small quantity would have done so much, but before it was gone I learned that our druggist kept Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and so got a large bottle for one-dollar but actually worth one hundred dollars. I only took one large tablespoonful three times a day and before I had taken one-half bottle I was all right and have been since. Gratefully yours,

GEORGE S. CHAMPLIN,
Ashaway, R. I.

Undermuslins
Great October Sale
French and American Makes

One year ago this week this department was entirely reorganized—New Methods, New Merchandise, New Prices. Since that time it has shown wonderful growth, and today stands second to none in value-giving and fair dealings with the public.

The week of October 7, 1910, will probably never be forgotten by the many shoppers who crowded the undermuslin section, and to make this week, beginning October 16, 1911, still greater in volume of business, Chandler & Co. and their whole buying force have worked the past summer, both in Europe and America, procuring great stocks to make this an epoch in underwear merchandising. La Vida Corsets
The Paris Verdict "Statuesque Lines —The Corsetless Effect"

Not one woman in 100 can acquire these statuesque lines without the aid of a supple, artistically cut corset, and so No. 290 La Vida Corset, endorsed by the fitters of Chandler & Co., meets all demands in giving the new large waisted effect, and at the same time confines the hips and abdomen of the well developed figure.

REFUTES CLAIM OF LUCE

No Connection Between Democratic Victory and Unemployment, He Says.

"There is no connection whatever," declares Governor Foss in a statement, "between prosperity of the textile mills and the wages of the workers."

The Governor shows in his retort to the speech of Robert Luce about the Farr Alpaca Company of Holyoke, that in years of Republican triumph wages have been reduced in textile mills to the extent of millions of dollars in a year.

Citing particularly the year 1908, when President Taft was elected, when Republican control throughout the counry was strengthened and when a Republican Governor was re-elected in Massachusetts, Governor Foss points out from statistics that in this State alone, during the succeeding year, the wages of 93,643 textile workers were reduced. The cut in pay amounted to $96,708.93 wekly and totalled for the year the stupendous sum of $5,028,967.36. The figures come from a State department presided over by a Republican and in which few but Republicans are employed. They present cold and absolute facts.

The statement of Governor Foss refutes the claim which Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham—Lodge machine candidate—and Robert Luce are shouting from the stump in textile localities, that mills will close and wages be reduced if Massachusetts this year voices a demand for a change in the Payne-Aldrich tariff by re-electing Governor Foss.

Governor Foss, himself a textile manufacturer, in his statement says:

Foss Answers Luce.

"Mr. Luce made a speech to the workers at Holyoke about the closing of the mills. It is difficult to determine, in view of his explanation, whether or not he intended to apply his remarks to the present campaign. He does not now seem willing to say that my re-election will cause the shut-down of textile mills. Whether his less aggressive position has been adopted by his running mate has not been disclosed.

"Nor is it possible to ascertain from the columns of the newspapers that are supporting the Republican candidates just what the Republican attitude on the tariff question is. One of these papers has said ever since my nomination that the Republicans would better leave the tariff issue alone; another has insisted that the tariff issue is of overshadowing importance; and a third, up to the time of Mr. Luce's speech, insisted that the necessities of the tariff situation called for my defeat. Since my statement, which Mr. Luce considered a reply to him, this third newspaper has had very little to say about the tariff. The Republican platform is quite non-commital on the tariff question.

"My assertions concerning the Farr Alpaca Company were intended to show that the present high tariff is unjust to laborers in the textile industry. The truth is as follows:

"The head of the Farr Alpaca Company told the Republican candidates that my success would involve the closing of the mills.

"The Republican candidates believed it and told the mill workers that if they wished to keep their employment they must vote for the Republican candidates. It was this campaign they were discussing.

"The Farr Alpaca Company pays 596 per cent. in yearly dividends on the only cash capital ever paid in.

"Does anyone believe that when I am re-elected the mills will close? Does any one believe the Republican candidates?

Prosperity and Wages.

"In the year 1907, the Republican party was in complete control of the country. In 1908, Mr. Taft was elected President and the Republican control of the National and State governments was strengthened. A Republican Governor was re-elected in Massachusetts. Yet, according to the Massachusetts report on the wages and hours of labor, the mill owners reduced the wages of 93,643 employes, an aggregate amount of $96,708.93 a week. Thus during the year of Republican triumph the men who are now attempting to intimidate textile workers rewarded them for supporting Republican candidates by taking $5,028,964.36 from their pay envelopes.

"In that same year, 1908, the Dartmouth Mills paid a cash dividend of 66 per cent. and a stock dividend of 100 per cent., and appropriated out of the surplus to build a new plant the sum of $3,000,000. Other mills paid their regular large dividends.

"Does anyone believe that there is any connection between the prosperity of the textile mills and the wages of the workers?

"Isn't is plain that the real connection is between exorbitant dividends and superfluous protection? Does any one believe there is any connection between a Foss victory and unemployment? The State report shows there isn't. The Republican candidates say there is. Does any one believe them?

"A few specimen dividends of textile mills should be interesting, not only to the textile workers but to every voter. These dividends do not represent the earnings but only the amount of the earnings which the owners are willing to take out of the business. In most cases substantial surplus is laid aside and money is expended for maintenance and improvements.

FOSS SHOWS HOW REPUBLICANS CUT WAGES IN MILLS

In the year 1907, the Republican party was in complete control of the country. In 1908 Mr. Taft was elected President and the Republican control of the National and State governments was strengthened. A Republican Governor was re-elected in Massachusetts. Yet, according to the Massachusetts report on the wages and hours of labor, the mill owners reduced the wages of 93,643 employes, an aggregate amount of $96,708.93 a week. Thus during the year of Republican triumph the men who are now attempting to intimidate textile workers rewarded them for supporting Republican candidates by taking $5,028,964.36 from their pay envelopes.—From statement by Governor Foss.

Quotes Figures to Prove Answer to Farr Alpaca Company Speech.

Cites Big Dividends.

In 1907, the Acushnet Mills paid 66 per cent.; in 1910, they declared a stock dividend of 100 per cent. In 1907, the Dartmouth Mill paid 66 per cent. In 1903, the Bourne Mill paid 40 per cent.; in 1906, the King Philip Mill paid 50 per cent. in stock or cash at the option of the stockholder.

"In 1907, the Laurel Lake Mill paid a stock dividend of 100 per cent.; in the same year the Merchants Mills paid a stock dividend of 50 per cent., and the Pocasset Mills paid a stock dividend of 100 per cent. In 1906, the Tecumseh Mill paid a stock dividend of 50 per cent. and in 1909, a bond dividend of 100 per cent., the cash dividend running in different years from 16 per cent. to 67 per cent.

"The textile mills of Massachusetts paid large dividends throughout the duration of the 1907 panic. The stocks of these mills are quoted at a premium of 200 to 400 per cent.

"Does anybody believe, who is acquainted with these facts that these mills will close down when I am re-elected?

"I am not an enemy of the textile industry. I am in it myself and I intend to remain in it. I am not going to close my mills. It is a good business. But I believe its market should not be restricted primarily to 90,000,000 consumers but should be expanded as England's has been until it reaches 900,000,000.

Calls for Removal.

"England alone has twice as many spindles as the whole United States. The removal of the superfluous protection in our schedules would reduce the cost of living, make our 90,000,000 people better customers, and reduce the cost of production. It would make it easier for us to compete in foreign markets and build up our industries upon a broader, steadier, and more generally profitable basis."

1,250,000 POUNDS OF TEA BROUGHT HERE

More than 1,250,000 pounds of tea reached Boston aboard the steamer Jesseric from China. There are 12,167 packages, and each package is so big several men are required to lift it. The tea is worth a fortune. Though it is the off season for firecrackers, she had enough of the noisemakers to satisfy a city of youngsters.

DRIVERS DISCUSS PROBLEMS TO-NIGHT

Business agents Harry P. Jennings, M. J. O'Donnell and J. F. Sullivan, appointed by John J. Fenton, president of the Teamsters' District Council, to take up a special trade question with the Newspaper Wagon Drivers' Union, meets in joint session with the Executive Committee of that organization at the local's headquarters tonight.

STOMACH GAS

The Cause of Many Misleading Symptoms and Unnecessary Alarm.

Gas on the stomach sometimes causes pressure on the heart and the sufferer is unnecessarily alarmed, fearing heart disease. In other cases it produces bloating and more needless worry. The real trouble is in the blood.

When the blood is poor and thin, and the stomach in consequence is imperfectly supplied with well-oxidized blood and nerve force, the digestive process becomes slow and fermentation of the food goes on, with formation of gas and certain acids. The pressure of the gas causes pain in the stomach; the acids produce the sour risings in the throat.

There are plenty of things to neutralize these acids, or, "sweeten the stomach" as it is called, but they do not cure the trouble. Pure rich blood which will tone up the stomach is required, as this case shows.

"Five years ago," says Mr. Walter Geary, of No. 303 Krams avenue, Roxborough, Philadelphia, Pa., "I was confined indoors, working in a machine shop, and became run down. For three years I suffered from gas on the stomach. I felt all bloated up, had terrible pains in the abdomen and was so dizzy at times that I could hardly see anything. I had bad headaches frequently. I lost in appetite and weight and got as yellow as could be. I felt tired all of the time and could hardly drag my legs along. I had trouble in keeping at work and was nervous and despondent.

"The doctors' prescriptions didn't help me and I thought there was no cure until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. A thorough trial of the pills completely cured me and I am now feeling in perfect health."

The vigor and strength which comes from a healthy stomach and a perfect digestion can only be obtained by keeping the blood pure and red. Sufferers from too much gas or acid on the stomach, heartburn, tenderness or pains through the pit of the stomach or any form of indigestion should start at once to build up and purify their blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Others who need a blood-builder will find these pills a most useful tonic.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by l druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, receipt of price, 50 cents per box; boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams dicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y. ite today for a free copy of our book—"What to Eat and How to Eat."

Many Nervous Wrecks Result of Sore Feet

Don't permit sore feet to continue; the constant nagging irritation works havoc on the nervous system and frequently brings on serious nervous disorders; besides this there is the torture which everyone knows so well. Don't suffer an hour. Here is a treatment that is the best known to science and is said to be a positive and quick cure for all foot ailments. "Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of hot water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes gently massaging the sore parts." Results come as if by magic. All soreness goes instantly and the feet feel simply delightful. Corns and callouses can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for inflamed bunions, aching feet, sweaty feet, ingrown nails, chilblains and frostbites. Calocide works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. A twenty-five cent box usually is enough to cure the worst feet. Any druggist has it in stock or if not he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't waste time and money on uncertain remedies which are sometimes recommended by dealers because they yield more profit. Calocide compound is not a patent medicine but an ethical preparation.

2 FISHERMEN LOST AT SEA

Marked by their flags that hung limply at half-mast, stories of two tragedies of the sea were brought to T wharf to-day when the little fishing schooners Ellen C. Burt and the Pontiac put in after a cruise along the coast.

Captain James O'Brien of the Burt told of the death of Frank Whittle, one of his men, and Captain Enos Nickerson related how Edward Mason of the North End perished.

The Burt's men were out in dories when they were struck by a squall. Captain O'Brien succeeded in picking up all of the men with the exception of Whittle. Attempt after attempt was made to rescue him, but finally his dory was lost and it is believed he perished.

RAILROAD SETS NEW FAST RUN

Messages from St. Paul to-day indicate that a new speed record has been made for coast to coast railroad traffic, the Great Northern Railroad having succeeded in putting up a new mark for trains between Seattle and St. Paul. Eight baggage cars, with a cargo of raw silk valued at $1,500,000, covered the 1,814 miles in 45 hours 16 minutes. This time is 2 hours 45 minutes better than that of the fastest mail train between the two points.

According to the word that came to Boston to-day the dispatch with which the train was rushed East opens up a new field of possibilities for transcontinental travel. It was stated that for the entire trip from Seattle to the Atlantic coast the record would be reduced by at least twelve or fouhteen hours.

GIVEN MEDAL FOR SAVING 4

Barrett, nineteen years old, of No. 157 Albany street, who rescued four boys from drowning in the basin in the rear of the Washington Chambers, Winthrop, last Summer. Inscribed on the back of the medal is his name and the date of the rescue. Accompanying the medal was a complimentary letter and a small button.

HUNTER FILLS MAN'S FACE WITH BIRDSHOT

The first accident in connection with the opening of the hunting season in Massachusetts occurred at Worcester, when Bernard Stimson of Grafton had his face and chest filled with birdshot from the gun of a man who mistook his brown cap for a partridge. Although painfully wounded it is expected that Stimson will recover.

MAKES SHAMPOOING A REAL PLEASURE

"The dread of washing one's hair is done away with, and shampooing greatly simplified, by the use of plain canthrox," writes Mae Martyn, beauty specialist for the Los Angeles Globe.

"By using for your shampoo a teaspoonful of canthrox, dissolved in a cup of hot water, you have a shampoo that cleanses perfectly, removing all dirt and dandruff, rinses easily, dries quickly and consumes only a few minutes for the entire process. This shampoo makes the hair soft, lustrous and fluffy. It does not bleach, deaden and cause the hair to split and become brittle, as soap shampoos do. I consider this inexpensive shampoo the only perfect shampoo."

2 M'NAMARA JURORS ABSENT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 17.—There was a slight delay at the opening of the McNamara trial this morning when some of the veniremen failed to answer to their names at roll call. The defence agreed to go ahead with those present.

E. F. Decker and T. W. Manning were drawn to take the two vacant chairs in the jury box.

Attorney Clarence S. Darrow then resumed the examination of veniremen. The expected program was somewhat changed when, instead of continuing the plan mapped out by himself of further questioning John W. Roberts and R. F. Bain, he began the examination of H. Y. Quackenbush.

In response to preliminary questions Quackenbush, whose hair and well trimmed beard are snow white, said he was sixty-five years old; that he was retired; that he had an express business here, and that formerly he had worked as a plasterer and bricklayer—part of the time as a contractor employing other men.

In consequence of the threatened slaughter of Christians, the consuls of the various foreign powers at Smyrna have advised their governments of the dangerous situation and have asked instructions. Many foreign residents of Smyrna are already fleeing.

BARTLETT BULL ADMINISTRATOR

BIDDEFORD, Me., Oct. 17.—Ralph S. Bartlett of Boston was to-day appointed administrator of the estate of Sara C. Bull, widow of Ole Bull, the famous violinist, by Judge Nathaniel Hobbes in the York County Probate Court. Mr. Bartlett is required to furnish a bond of $700,000, the largest bond on record in the county.

The appointment of Mr. Bartlett follows an extended litigation. Mrs. Bull died last Winter. Her daughter, Ole Bull Vaughan, contested the will through Attorneys Ralph S. Bartlett and Sherman Whipple of Boston. Sensational testimony was introduced of the intimacy of Mrs. Bull with Hindu mystics. Early in July a settlement was arrived at. On the day that the terms were to be arranged the contestant, Mrs. Vaughan, died.

The petition for the appointment of Mr. Bartlett as administrator was filed July 18, returnable September 5. Attorney T. L. Talbot filed an appearance without naming his client. He was ordered by Judge Hobbes to name his client within eight days. He named Joseph G. Thorp, a brother of Mrs. Bull. After a conference in Boston yesterday, Mr. Thorp's appearance was withdrawn, and Mr. Bartlett was appointed administrator.

The will of Mrs. Vaughan, filed for probate a few weeks ago, will come up for probate at the November term, beginning the first Tuesday in November. Under its terms the bulk of her estate, amounting to about half a million dollars, goes to her adopted daughter, a four-year-old girl.

Peart, Lieut.-Colonel Damon, Colonel John Dean, Colonel William Evans, Colonel R. E. Holz, Colonel W. McIntyre, Colonel John Margetts, Lieut.-Colonel W. E. Cox, Lieut.-Colonel W. WINS $3,572 AGAINST STEAMSHIP COMPANY

James E. Young of Brookline was to-day awarded $3,572.40 by a jury in the Norfolk Superior Court in his suit on an assigned claim against the Canadian, Atlantic and Plant Steamship Company. ALL YOU NEED IS A CASCARET TONIGHT

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, Coated Tongue or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out to-night and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

Under False Colors

Ships sailing under false colors are usually pirates. Beware of the false colors flaunted by parlor opticians. Your eyesight is too precious; take no chances. Go to Wilson Bros., the Scollay Sq. jewellers, who employ five skilled opticians; glasses repaired while you wait; prescription not necessary; bring in your broken lens; open evenings.

Wolf's, "My Clothier," corner Hanover and Portland streets, is most easily reached from the Haymarket square, Adams square, Scollay square and Friend Union street stations of the Subway.

GLIDDEN TOUR MAKES SPEED

By DUNCAN CURRY.

STAUNTON, Va., Oct. 17.—After a long but really delightful trip of 182 miles, most of it on good roads, which included nearly 100 miles over the beautiful Shenandoah Valley pike, the Glidden tourists rolled into this fine old Virginia city. They were welcomed by all the inhabitants, black and white, while 400 boys of the Staunton Military Academy lined the streets and presented arms as each car swept by.

There were one or two inharmonious features in an otherwise perfect trip. The first accident of the tour occurred about three miles south of Charleston, W. Va., when the Pierce Arrow press car, driven by O. A. Brictson of Brookins, S. D., skidded off the road, tore up a telegraph pole by the roots, broke the pole in half, carried it twelve feet on its radiator and rolled over on its side. Fortunately, as it was very wet, the top was up, and beyond a slight shaking up none of the passengers received even a scratch. Mr. Brictson's guests included Starter E. L. Ferguson, R. E. Anderson and Harry P. Burchell, a New York newspaper man. The accident was due to reckless driving. Brictson came up on a bunch of fifteen cars which were behind the pacemaker and rushed by four of them; he then attempted to pass another car at full speed, but lost control of his car at a slight bend in the road and crashed into the telegraph pole.

The only other incident of the trip was the holding up of twenty-three of the cars by the local authorities of Harrisonburg, Va., about twenty miles north of here. The local police warned every one to drive slowly, and all followed his instructions; but about a mile outside of the town a woman who guards the toll gate shut it down and said that the Mayor had instructed her to arrest all of the drivers. She acted as judge and jury and fined every one $10; but, after much argument, she refunded the money and took the numbers of the cars instead.

As on Sunday, most of the day's run was through historical country of Civil War times, including Antietam, Harper's Ferry and Winchester; but the tourists, with the call of the road in their ears, did not pause and look at the monuments and tablets, but rushed on to Winchester, where they had to wait over an hour for lunch.

The Maxwell, Ford, Flanders, Stevens-Duryea, Columbia, Maxwell combination, Marathon Olds, one of the Cadillac teams and the Metz team all have clean scores. Outside of this, the Chalmers press car, the first of the 1912 six-cylinder cars, is also making a fine record.

AVIATOR ROBINSON STARTS LONG FLIGHT

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 17.—Hugh Robinson left Lake Calhoun, Minneapolis, at 9:10 a. m. to-day in an attempt to reach the Gulf of Mexico in a Curtiss hydroplane. He will follow the course of the Mississippi River.

QUESTIONS TO FROTHINGHAM

Everett Democrats, in a special registered mail letter to-day, put a series of questions to Louis A. Frothingham, Lodge machine Republican candidate for Governor, and to-night in Whittier Hall, where the Lieutenant-Governor, with other Republican spellbinders, are to speak, citizens generally, as well as Democrats, will be interested in the answers, if any, that Candidate Frothingham may give.

The questions are propounded over the signature of James J. Irwin, a former Republican, but now vice-president of the Everett Democratic City Committee. They are:

The Questions.

We are a community consisting for the greater part of families in which the expense of education for our children is a serious problem. We, therefore, ask you to tell us why you voted against free textbooks for the use of children in our public schools.

We are vitally interested in the transportation problem. We, therefore, ask you to tell us why you voted against the extension of five-cent fares.

A large portion of our community consists of wage earners and those dependent upon them. We ask you to tell us why you voted against reducing the hours of labor for women and children.

We fully realize that President Taft has vetoed the attempts made by the Democrats and insurgent Republicans in Congress to reduce the taxes on the necessaries of life under the Payne-Aldrich tariff, which revised upward the Dingley tariff and further increased the high cost of living. We therefore ask you to tell us whether you believe in stand-pat Republicanism or in insurgent Republicanism.

Rise in Price of Sugar.

The rise in the price of sugar since the Sugar Trust was fined by the courts for defrauding revenue officers has taken thousands of dollars out of the pockets of citizens of Everett. We ask you to tell us whether you believe that the Sugar Trust deserves the protection and privilege granted it by the Payne-Aldrich law.

We propose to furnish for the last issue of the local papers prior to the election a complete itemized statement of our campaign expenses, and what if anything we propose to spend and how in getting out voters on election day. We therefore ask you to tell us whether you are willing that your committee, the local Republican City Committee and the committees of the several Republican Legislative candidates in our district shall do likewise for the information of voters in this electorate.

We are the elected representatives of 2,000 voters in Everett, many of them former Republicans, who cast the majority vote for Governor at the last State election, and we respectfully request you to answer their several questions fully and frankly for their information and for the information of citizens generally.

'BOY BROKER' IN GOLDBERG CASE

The name of Robert E. Davie, the "boy broker," under indictment for the alleged theft of $150,000, was injected into Ullian robbery case, in which Joseph and Jacob Goldberg are being tried for the theft of $15,000 at Ullian's Washington street jewelry store, before Judge Rattigan at the Superior Criminal Court to-day.

Davie was brought into court from the Charles Street Jail at the request of Attorney Scharton, counsel for the two Goldbergs, who asserted that the "boy broker" had gained certain information from Harris Rothstein, also implicated in the Ullian robbery, while they were occupying adjoining cells.

Immediately after being brought into court Davie demanded the right to confer with his counsel, Attorney Anderson. He refused to testify unless this right was granted him, and after his wish had been granted Attorney Scharton withdrew his request that the "boy broker" be placed on the witness stand.

Defence Is Opened.

This incident closed the case for the prosecution, and the defence opened by calling Mrs. Jennie Garber of No. 143 Chambers street to the stand, she being a sister-in-law to the Goldbergs.

Mrs. Garber declared that Harris Rothstein, whose alleged confession is said to play an important part in the prosecution's case, came to her house the Friday preceding the robbery. The time previously had been set at Saturday.

Jacob Goldberg then took the stand in his own defence, his first testimony being that Joseph Goldberg was not his brother. In accounting for his possession of the stolen jewelry, identified as that stolen from Ullian, he said that it had been obtained from Rothstein. He swore that he first bought $50 worth of jewelry from Rothstein on March 2, shortly after the robbery, and that Joseph was brought into the transaction later when Rothstein wanted to sell still other jewelry.

This latter transaction, he said, took place at the saloon owned by Constanislous Kiasowski at Brooklyn, N. Y., and that Rothstein afterward swore vengeance on him and Joseph for not paying the exact price claimed.

BRANDEIS CONFERS ON TOBACCO CASE

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Louis D. Brandeis and Felix H. Levy, counsel for independent tobacco dealers, were in conference all morning studying the American Tobacco disintegration plan. After the conference Mr. Levy stated it was too early to make public any statement as to intentions of the independents, and that conferences would be continued to-day and to-morrow.

ANCIENTS THANK THE AMERICAN

Steaming athwart the Gulf Stream with a cool sou'easter blowing, with plenty for comfort on deck and, above all, with Sunday AMERICANS of that morning's issue to read, proved so enjoyable a treat to the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company that at their first meeting last night after their return from Bermuda and Atlanta, they passed a vote of thanks to the Sunday AMERICAN for its enterprise.

The Ancients got their Sunday AMERICANS with all the news while they were out on the broad Atlantic, the morning of October 1. 'Twas a surprise, and such a pleasant one that not a soul did anything all morning, but rest in the steamer chairs and read. The issue was a special souvenir edition, with the complete Sunday paper and two pages of pictures and stories of the Ancients.

Remembering the work of "Dick" Sears, staff representative of the AMERICAN and an Ancient, who was the newsboy of the occasion, the company voted him their special thanks. They recalled, they said in their speeches, how fine a thing it was at sea to read the latest news and realize that they had nothing to do till to-morrow."

While the members of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration to-day tried to effect a settlement between the Lynn shoe cutters affiliated with the Knights of Labor at a conference at the State House, at which Albert H. Creighton, who represents the manufacturers, and Master Workman Stephen Walsh, the cutters, the latter quit work or are being refused admission to the factories.

The labor trouble is either a strike or a lockout according to the point of view.

BROCKTON, Oct. 14—James Cushman of Menlo street, while eating a piece of squash pie clapped his hand to his mouth and cried in pain, for he had bitten into a hard object. Wednesday, October 18th, Will Be Blue Ribbon Day at Gilchrist's

Tomorrow will be our 19th Blue Ribbon Day. It will be the biggest in our History if values will make it so. No competitive effort has yet equalled the wonderful Blue Ribbon Day Bargains at Gilchrist's. No other store ever will equal them.

It's "our sale day." Invented and promoted by us. We're justly proud of its achievements for it has no equal in New England merchandising.

New England folks have caught the enthusiasm of "Blue Ribbon" Sales. Tomorrow's crowds will show you how a "real sale" succeeds.

SEAVEY HELD FOR EXPLOSION

Fred W. Seavey, who is charged with having dynamited his Swampscott restaurant early in the morning of October 12, was arraigned to-day at Lynn. He pleaded not guilty. Judge Lummus held him in $3,000 for the Superior Court.

Chief of Police Corson of Swampscott testified that he questioned Seavey as to his whereabouts on the night of the explosion. "Seavey told me," said the Chief, "That he left Swampscott on the 9:28 train for Boston and got back about 1 o'clock." Mrs. Annie E. Collins, Seavey's landlady, testified that Seavey was in his room after 10 o'clock, and Chief Corson testified that the 9:28 train had been changed before October 12 to 10 o'clock.

SURPRISE IN KELIHER CASE

Close questioning by Judge Putnam of United States District Attorney French in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to-day at the resumption of the arguments on the application of William J. ("Bill Bill"), Keliher for a new trial surprised the government counsel and others in the court room who have closely followed the now famous case.

Keliher was convicted of complicity with George W. Coleman, former cashier of the National City Bank of Cambridge, in wrecking that institution, and was sentenced to eighteen years in State prison. Coleman is now in the Greenfield jail.

PROPER WALK IS AID TO WOMEN'S BEAUTY

Foot Specialist Declares Few Women in Boston Know How to Walk.

By SYBIL WARNE.

Is your foot beautiful?

Do you know that beauty concerns the foot as well as the hand and face?

Do you know how to walk? One person in a hundred knows how to walk. The others show their defects in their tread.

Dr. William B. Turnbull, a well-known specialist in the Back Bay, who has given years to the study of the foot, thinks that we are reaping to-day the neglect of the foot. Too many people think that any sort of care will do for their feet and turn their attention to the care of the hand and face.

Our nervous system is greatly impaired on account of this neglect, says Dr. Trumbell. He urges mothers to bestow care upon the feet of infants and whatever attention is given to these younger years will show itself to much advantage afterwards.

The tired feeling that many feel, especially women, is due largely to the oversight of these important members of the body.

With a good tread, and with the proper poise of our bodies, understanding how to walk, we will overcome many of the awkward motions as we go along the street.

In Good Old Times.

Dr. Turnbull says that people in Colonial times seemed to be rid of many of our nervous diseases, because they used their feet to good advantage and took care of them. They trod upon soft turf, they did not push the bones to the front of the feet by imperfect foot gear.

He claims that with a little daily attention to our instruments of walking we will see people doing better work and able to overcome the ills they now assign to indigestion and other causes.

"What makes a beautiful foot in woman?" asks Dr. Turnbull.

"This whole question of beauty is not one of the face or the hands, but concerns the poise of the body and nothing plays so large a part in this as the feet well cared for," he says.

"Beauty has as much to do with the foot as it does with the hand. People will say, 'what a beautiful hand that person has,' but they very seldom talk about the foot.

Few Walk Rightly.

"You stand on the street and watch how few people know how to walk. The reason why people do not know how to walk is due to the fact that their feet get so little care compared with the rest of the body.

"So many people will spend time and energy upon their hands, but they neglect the care of the feet, and you can notice this in the way that they walk.

"To make the feet beautiful, the care should begin with infant years.

"The muscles should be cared for so that they support the bones. It is not right to assume that any sort of care will do for the feet in those tender years. Mothers should be careful in this direction, for an ounce of prevention at that time is worth a pound of cure later on.

"Bathe your children's feet with alcohol in the water. When that child grows up, it will show the care of those early years. Nothing is so incongruous as to see a young lady dressed in the height of fashion with the blot of a poor walk upon her.

Cause of Fatigue.

"Yet you see these young women daily. It is not their shoes that are to be censured all the time, but it is this allowing the foot to be cared for in any old way.

"Much of the nervous trouble afflicting women in society is due to this. They get so easily tired, if they walk several blocks. Do you know, that the feet well cared for, will cure many of our ills. Good feet will make possible a good walk. Every woman should walk a good distance every day.

"She should walk easily. She should walk as if she had no trouble in walking. But most of the women walk as if it were the most disagreeable thing they had to do in the world, and get so tired with the little treading that they do.

"I would stake my reputation on this, that if half the women who say that they are so tired, and cannot do this, would for the next year pay some heed to the care of their feet, as much as they often bestow upon their faces and arms, they would get rid of this indifference that we run across in so many society people, who will do anything else but take a good walk, for they are so easily tired out.

"There is the medicated bath three times a week at least to keep up the circulation in the feet, which is most important.

"Women should not be taking headache powders as a result of their lack of exercise. They are too tired to walk because they have never cared to attend to the instruments of walking.

"This generation show it. We have hard pavements to tread upon. Our forefathers had the soft turf. What we have to walk upon has something to do with the walking gait that we take up. Look around Boston and about one in one hundred knows how to walk, because they show a lack of care of their feet.

"When you see a woman passing in the street, able to walk well and showing that she has the power to walk well, and that the muscles of her feet are not contracted, you can't help admiring her.

"I do not approve of walking barefooted. I do not see much to be gained by this. Do not push the bones of your feet to the front. Keep them where they belong.

"Then when you are asked to take a walk, you will not say that 'I cannot walk' or 'it hurts me to walk.' Good feet make possible long walks, and long walks make healthy women.

ASTORS COMING HOME ON NOV. 10

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Colonel Astor's bride, will take her place among the young hostesses this Winter, it seems quite certain, for their house on Fifth avenue and Sixty-fifth street is being prepared for their homecoming about November 10.

This, of course, means that the Astors will occupy their box at the Metropolitan and do their share of entertaining in connection with the opera's premiere.

They have been cruising in Southern waters of late, but are expected back here the latter part of this month. They will then go to Ferncliffe, their place at Rhinebeck, which they will keep open until late in the season, if not all Winter.

100 KILLED BY QUAKE IN SICILY

CATANIA, Sicily, Oct. 17.—One hundred or more persons were killed, and 200 were injured in an earthquake that rocked the country about the base of Mt. Aetna on Sunday, according to information brought from the affected zone to-day. The destruction of communication prevented word of the disaster from reaching the outside world earlier.

Mt. Aetna became active following the earthshock, and is at present emitting large quantities of smoke and lava. The town of Acireale at the base of the mountain was partially destroyed, but the heaviest loss of life, so far as at present known, occurred at Giarro, where fifty were killed.

YOUNG MAN ENDS HIS OWN LIFE

A well dressed and handsome young man of twenty-one who had registered as John Denard of Roxbury was found a suicide by gas poisoning in his room at the Prebles House, No. 133 Court street, to-day. He had left a call for 8 o'clock, and when no answer came to the knock an entrance was effected along the fire escape. Denard was dead in bed, a tube from the gas jet in his mouth, the quilts heaped over his head and every chink about the door and window plugged with paper.

COMPETITION in the shoe manufacturing industry is more free than in any other extensive industry. There are over 1200 individual concerns in the United States. The United Shoe Machinery Company not only enables the small manufacturer to equip his factory with such of its machinery as he needs on the investment of a small amount of capital, but in leasing its machines it treats all manufacturers alike. The small manufacturer gets precisely the same terms as the large manufacturer, and thus competition is assured.

At the New England Fair in the Mechanics Building is a complete shoemaking plant, with sixty machines of the Company in actual operation making women's high grade Goodyear Welt Shoes.

Visit the Fair and learn for yourself the terms upon which the shoe manufacturer enjoys the use of each machine.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures.

"Favorite Prescription" is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice.

Some of the numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 31 one-cent stamps for cloth-bound copy.

If sick consult the Doctor, free of charge, by letter. All such communications are held sacredly confidential.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate and regulate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

FRIENDS OF CAMBRIDGE PASTOR MAKE PROTEST

PASTOR NAMED IN GIRL'S TRAGEDY IS ASKED TO RESIGN

"I have just been discussing the affair with my wife and I think that it is a disgrace to the church. Here is a letter which I am now going to mail to Mr. Richeson, in which I am asking him to resign the pastorate of our church.

"I shall have a meeting of the trustees called right away, and I think that they will agree with me in saying that the affair is a disgrace to the church and that Mr. Richeson's resignation should be asked for immediately."—Statement by William Wilson of the finance committee of Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge.

On the little knoll on which the Oak Grove Cemetery lies at Hyannis, overlooking the ocean, the body of Miss Alice Linnell, who killed herself because the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of Cambridge, had betrothed himself to another girl, was laid this afternoon, while friends, relatives and classmates in the Hyannis High School and the State Normal School stood in a drizzle of rain with uncovered heads and wept.

The last rites were said at the grave, the Rev. Mathew Francais, who succeeded Rev. Mr. Richeson as pastor of the Hyannis Baptist Church, officiating. The service was held in the home of the young girl's parents at Hyannisport. So great was the crowd that came to pay their last respects to one whom they esteemed, that the house could not contain them all.

The windows and doors were opened. On the porch and on the lawn near the windows stood scores, on whose unheeding brows the rain fell. Not a one but wept with the parents and sisters of the suicide.

Classmates at the Bier.

Rev. Mr. Francais's sermon was a simple eulogy of Miss Linnell's life. He referred to her as a worker for good in the parish, and later when she became a volunteer worker in Boston. He spoke of her as one of the brightest girls in the community and one whom old and young alike loved and respected.

The casket lay in the double parlor of the Hyannisport home, surrounded by a mound of flowers. These came from all over the Cape, and some from as far as Brockton, the tributes of friends of the family. The funeral was the saddest and most largest attended of any ever held in this part of the Cape.

Near the coffin while the services continued stood more than a score of Miss Linnell's classmates at the high school and at the State Normal school here. At the grave they were again stationed near the body until all that was mortal of the young woman was laid in the ground.

The bearers were classmates also. They were Francis Smith and Harold Smith, who were at high school with Miss Linnell, and Fred Nason and Carl Hopkins, who attended the normal school with her.

In the procession to the cemetery, which lies on Sea street, near the ocean, there were more than two score hacks.

Friends Defend Minister.

Prominent members of the Immanuel Baptist church of Cambridge met at the residence of one of the members to-day and prepared a statement protesting against the finance commission of the church taking any action to-night, at their meeting, in reference to the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson.

It became known to-day that the young clergyman is ill and in the hands of a physician. It is believed that he is at the home of his fiancee, Miss Violet Edmands, of Brookline.

The following statement, prepared under the instruction of counsel, was typewritten and circulated among the membership of the church:

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 17, 1911.

To prevent hasty and biased action in the excitement of the moment, we, the undersigned representatives of the membership of the Immanuel Baptist Church, acting under the advice of eminent counsel, respectfully, formally and emphatically protest against any action being taken by the finance committee, or any other committee of the church, in regard to the current rumors concerning the character of our pastor, thus forestalling orderly investigation and action, according to the bylaws of our church.

A prominent member of the church, who did not want his name used, was asked to-day:

"Can I see the Rev. Mr. Richeson?"

"No," replied the man, "he is in no condition for any one to see him."

At his rooms, No. 147 Magazine street, Cambridge, a woman in charge was asked:

"Has the Rev. Mr. Richeson returned home?"

"He has not," she replied.

"Where is he?"

"I don't know."

"When do you expect him?"

"I don't know."

Mrs. Edmands, the mother of the clergyman's fiancee, was asked:

"Is the Rev. Mr. Richeson at your house?"

"I don't care to say," replied the woman.

A member of the church said to-day that any action that might be taken this evening by the finance committee would have no standing, as the committee has no power to act. It requires a quorum of the church membership to take action on anything of that character, he said. This quorum is placed at thirty members. The members of the finance committee who are to meet this evening are Thomas M. Rumney (chairman), W. T. Wilson, G. W. Clapp, Harry Herbert, J. W. Evans, C. A. Perry and Charles Anderson.

It was found by a canvass of the membership of the church to-day that the women of the congregation are sticking by the pastor and refuse to believe that he should be blamed.

Engagement Still Holds.

Rev. L. H. Merrill, pastor of the Evangelical Church of Everett, in discussing the tragedy, said:

"Miss Linnell was a charming woman. It is heart-breaking to hear of a tragedy of this character. It would take an overwhelming grief to drive a girl to take her life. If the clergyman had any hand in the matter it is very unfortunate for him."

The Rev. Mr. Richeson did not attend the funeral of the girl whose affections he is declared to have won while he was pastor of the Baptist Church in Hyannisport, his first pastorate. He followed his policy of remaining in seclusion at the home of his fiancee and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Grant Edmands of Devon road, Chestnut Hill, Brookline. There he denied himself to all inquirers.

It was said that the clergyman is suffering from another of the nervous breakdowns to which he is subject, but any information regarding him or the case is refused at the Edmands home.

Mrs. Edmands, mother of the minister's prospective bride, however, in the only statement members of her family have made since the death of Miss Linnell, intimates that neither that sad circumstance nor the fact that the autopsy by Medical Examiner Leary at the City Hospital morgue revealed the probable reason for Miss Linnell's act, will result in the breaking of the engagement between her daughter and the Rev. Mr. Richeson. To an inquiry over the telephone she replied:

> The engagement existing between my daughter and Mr. Richeson remains unchanged. This engagement has not been broken. That is all I have to say.

Interviews with officials and members of the Immanuel Church reveal a peculiar division of sentiment regarding the scandal that has followed the suicide of Miss Linnell. Several women members of the congregation, who, it is asserted, represent the feeling of the majority of the feminine portion of the Rev. Mr. Richeson's present flock, are entirely in favor of the pastor. They hold him to be blameless in the affair and hint strongly that if there was any affection between him and Miss Linnell it was entirely on the dead girl's side and that the pastor merely conducted himself toward her as he did toward the other women in his former parish at Hyannisport.

It was quite possible, they intimate, that she, being young and impulsive, misunderstood the attitude of the young and good-looking pastor.

Women Defend Pastor.

Mrs. John E. Smith of Granite street, wife of the sexton of the church, when asked her opinion of the case by an AMERICAN reporter, said: "It is a very sad affair indeed. It grieves me to think that the name of our revered pastor had to be mentioned in connection with it. I know nothing about the unfortunate young lady, but I can say this, that I do not believe all the things that have been said about Mr. Richeson. He has been a model pastor since he took charge of our church. The newspapers, in my opinion, have been very unfair to him. He may have kept company with the young lady at some time, or he may only have been a friend who gave her spiritual advice. Whatever way it may have been, I think that he acted in the right way, as he is a very intelligent man, and, as a preacher of the Gospel, certainly must know right from wrong."

Mrs. George Clapp of No. 286 Brookline street, one of the leaders in the social affairs of the congregation, said: "I don't see why so much of the blame should be attached to Mr. Richeson. I do not think that it is right to embarrass the poor young clergymen in that way. If the girl liked him and killed herself because he did not choose to marry her it is not his fault. I do not think the trustees of the church should think anything of the matter at all. The poor man is innocent and I believe that most of the parishioners have implicit confidence in him. It would be a great injustice to Mr. Richeson if the trustees should ask for his resignation. He is an excellent pastor and spiritual adviser. He is an earnest worker and has obtained great results since he assumed charge of the Immanuel Baptist Church."

William Wilson of No. 84 Pearl street, one of the members of the finance committee of the church, said: "I have just been discussing the affair with my wife and I think that it is a disgrace to the church. Here is a letter which I am now going to mail to Mr. Richeson, in which I am asking him to resign the pastorate of our church.

"I shall have a meeting of the trustees called right away, and I think that they will agree with me in saying that the affair is a disgrace to the church and that Mr. Richeson's resignation should be asked for immediately."

Girl Reported Engaged to Astor

Miss Margaret F. Andrews of Newport, to whom John Jacob Astor's son Vincent has been very attentive.

IRISH PLAY WINS CENSOR

Neither Mayor Fitzgerald nor Commissioner O'Meara will take any steps to censor or suppress portions of "The Play Boy of the Western World," the drama which drew "boos" and hisses from the audience when presented at the Plymouth Theatre by the Irish players last night, it was announced to-day. Mayor Fitzgerald's secretary, William A. Leahy, attended on behalf of the Mayor, and Commissioner O'Meara was also represented.

Secretary Leahy in an extended criticism of the play declares that in his opinion it furnishes no true portrait of Irish atmosphere or the Irish people. The Mayor's office, however, does not feel called upon to approve or disapprove any school of drama. The language used in the play, Secretary Leahy finds, is wisely softened by the players themselves from the original lines. He characterizes the incident where the "Play Boy" bites his father's leg as "monstrous and disgusting," and declares himself in sympathy "with those intelligent people in the audience who resented the morbid elements in the play."

At the same time, Secretary Leahy finds that there is nothing improper in the play as presented, and nothing for which the play may be censored.

Here is Secretary Leahy's report to the Mayor:

By WILLIAM A. LEAHY.

The Mayor and the police commissioner can prohibit and expurgate only those performances which in the words of the statute are obscene or immoral. They are not called on, as I take it, to approve or disapprove a particular school of writing. Now the language in this play, wisely softened from the original by the players themselves, is still rather coarse in parts and the incident of the biting of Shane's leg by the playboy is monstrous and disgusting. But a stick of moral dynamite is the last thing to look for here. If obscenity is to be found on the stage in Boston it must be sought elsewhere and not at the Plymouth Theatre.

At the same time one must confess a certain sympathy with those excellent sordid elements in these stories of peasant life. This, they say, is not Kathleen Ni Houlihan, the Ireland of young men's visions, with white wings stirring beneath her folded shawl. It is a tattered and frowsy hag sitting for her portrait to a cynic. The features may be rendered, but the sentiment and glamor are gone, and with them the human and vital truth. Such critics are literally right. Every character and scene and phrase in those days may be punctiliously Irish, but the sum of it all is not Ireland.

Take Pictures Literally.

The mistake, however, lies in taking the pictures literally. Some of these playwrights, of course, are realists, or copyists of life, and, like others of their kind, they happen to prefer strong brine to rose water and see truth chiefly in the ugliness of things. A miser and a fratricide for them rather than a lover and a hero! Yet the miser and the fratricide have respectable literary ancestry. Moliere has his Harpagon and Shakespeare his Richard the Third. If these minor playwrights were the important men of the group one might discuss realism with its pleading industry and its conviction of ultimate authority, as of mortals to whom the Recording Angel has loaned him his pen for a while.

But, as it happens, the two remarkable men among the Irish playwrights are not realistic at all. Yeats and Synge are symbolistic and their plays are as fantastic and fabulous as the Tales of the Round Table. Being modern, of course, and therefore self-conscious, the poets must enfold meanings more or less subtle—revelations, if you will—in their entertaining myths. Kathleen Ni Houlihan, for example, is a riddle which any child might read—a transparent and extremely beautiful allegory, in which the visitor to the humble cottage is not a poor old woman, but some incarnated vision of the sorrowing mother-land, which lures the young lover from the side of his bride-to-be.

WOMAN DIES SUDDENLY.

Mrs. Bridget Glinch, sixty, was found dead in bed early to-day at her home, suite 9, No. 109 Sterling street, Roxbury. Death is believed to have been due to natural causes.

REPORT ASTOR ENGAGED AGAIN

William Vincent Astor, the twenty-year-old son of John Jacob Astor, now in Harvard, is reported engaged to the beautiful Miss Margaret F. Andrews of Newport.

Because of the youth of young Astor, his father is said to be opposed to a marriage or engagement, and his aunt, Mrs. M. Orme Wilson, who was Caroline Astor, has arrived in Newport with her husband to remain until November 1st and keep her eye on Vincent.

Miss Andrews is only nineteen and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews, who are wealthy residents of Newport. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews are said to be as opposed as Astor to the engagement of their daughter and they have announced that the will spend the Winter abroad.

Going Abroad Again.

As the Andrews are only back a few weeks from a trip around the world, the gossips are wondering if their projected trip abroad is not to get Margaret away from the dangerous vicinity of William Vincent Astor.

Young Astor said not long ago, "You needn't think I'm engaged to every girl that I trot around with and pay a little polite attention."

That's all right, but Vincent has been going to Newport every week, although the family has departed, and remaining over Sunday. On each of these visits he has met Miss Andrews and gone auto riding with her or taken her to the theatre, or both.

And according to talkative persons employed in the postoffice of the Andrews family or elsewhere, Miss Andrews receives several Astor letters between these weekly meetings.

Richest Boy in Harvard.

Young Astor is said to be the richest man in Harvard, and his parents wish him to be the most studious. But Love can put study in the background, and Colonel Astor and Mrs. Wilson believe that Astor ought to let love alone until after his graduation. He has everything that money could wish for—automobiles, horses, dogs, etc. His quarters at Harvard are luxurious and yet he spends as much time as he dares in Newport.

Newport people do not think his family would make any serious objection to an engagement with Miss Andrews if he were not so young. She had the distinction of being confirmed by the Pope last Winter in Rome.

All Newport is agog over the little romance. Because they are so well known, they cannot go out riding or walking or attend the theatre together without everybody in the city knowing about it.

Everybody interested denies an engagement, but in Newport everything is denied until it is officially announced.

TWENTY HURT IN CAR CRASH

CLINTON, Oct. 17.—Twenty passengers, among whom were several women, were hurt, some of them seriously, this afternoon, when an electric car of the Worcester line collided with a steam road roller at the foot of a hill in the town of Boylston, near the Worcester city line.

Among those injured were:

Walter Devoe of Boylston; cut on hands and face.

Mrs. George Rogers, cut and bruised.

Hugh McMackin, the conductor of the car; cut and bruised.

The car was bound from Worcester to Clinton. When the car started down the grade the motorman shut off the power, but he was unable to hold the car.

The track was damp and the wheels slid along. The steam roller was on the track and the car crashed into it. The car was badly smashed. There were twenty people in the car. They were thrown from their seats. Flying glass cut the faces and hands of the passengers.

Some of the injured people were taken to Worcester for medical treatment.

Hugh Fullerton Tells How the Second Game Was Won

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—One terrific smash by Frank Baker beat New York in a brilliant game yesterday, put the Athletics on even terms in the World's Series and broke the hearts of the Giants.

The home run drive that went high over the crowd, cleared the right field wall and alighted in Twenty-first street, sent home two runs and insured victory.

It was another pitchers' battle and a wonderful one after the two pitchers settled to the task. In the first inning it seemed that Rube Marquard would not last, but after a wretched start he rallied and only Baker's home run, coming after Collins doubled, with two out in the sixth, broke up the game.

Plank pitched wonderful ball all the way, with the exception of the second inning, when he appeared to lack control. At every other stage he was master, outguessing the Giants and making some of them look bad. Four times he struck Devore out, and not once did Devore even offer at the ball. Philadelphia outplayed the Giants all the way and showed more class and more finish to their work.

The play was called at 2:01 with Giants at bat and Devore up. A ball was followed by three strikes in succession and Devore was out. Every one of Devore's strikes were called on him. Doyle who followed got two balls in succession followed by a strike. Then came another ball and a second strike, the last was a foul. The third was called and he flied to Lord on the next. Snodgrass was hit by a pitched ball and took his base. Murray who followed him flied out to second.

Lord drew a strike, and a second one followed. He then singled to right, and took second on Murray's bad fumble. Oldring, who followed him, went out, Marquard to Merkle, advancing Lord by the sacrifice. Lord scored on a wild pitch, which went as Collins's first ball. The Philadelphia rooters broke into a perfect frenzy as the Athletic left fielder came in with the first run. Marquard put the next one over for a strike. Collins got first on a clean single. Baker's effort was a foul strike. Another of the same followed, the ball going over the grandstand. He struck out. Murphy followed. He drew a ball. The next was a strike. The second strike followed. He went out on the next, flying to Devore.

Ex-Rustler Hits Double.

Merkle drew two balls in succession followed by a strike. The next was also wide. He went out short to first. Herzog's first was a strike, so was the second. A ball followed, and then the ex-Rustler doubled to centre. Fletcher was out second to first, Herzog going to third. A roar of applause greeted Meyers when he stepped out to the plate. The New York contingent begged the big Indian to line it out. His first hit was a strike followed by a ball. He singled to centre field, scoring Herzog. The biggest ovation that a visiting player ever got on Philadelphia grounds was handed to the Chief as he landed on first. Marquard drew two balls, and Plank sent the next one also wide. Two strikes followed, and he fanned the next one.

Marquard's first one to Davis went wide. The next was a strike. Another followed and he died on the next, offering, second to first. Barry got a strike for his initial number. A second followed. Barry got second on a long fly which Devore fumbled. The official scorers gave Barry a hit and exempted Devore from an error. Thomas flied out to Devore. Plank got a ball, and then went out, catcher to first. He hit an easy one along the first base foul line which Meyers grabbed and got to Merkle in time to head him off.

Devore drew a strike and then another, and he fanned on the next. Doyle's first was a ball. He flied to Lord. Snodgrass drew a strike. A second followed. Plank put the next one wide. Then Snodgrass singled. Murray swung wide at the first ball, and then he got two balls. He then went out, pitcher to first.

Lord's first was a ball. Two strikes followed. The next was also a ball and he fanned on the following one. Oldring fouled out to Meyers. Collins flied out to Devore.

Merkle was the first man up and Plank handed him a ball as a starter. The next was a strike and he went out, Collins to Davis. Herzog's first was a ball. A strike followed. Plank again failed to locate the plate. He flied to Barry. Fletcher drew a strike and went out to Barry to Davis.

Baker went out, Doyle to Merkle. Murphy, who followed opened with a strike followed by a second. Two balls followed, and he went out to left field. Davis drew a wide one and then a strike. He fouled for a second strike and he went out on a foul to Myers.

Myers missed the first and went out, Baker to Davis. Marquard swung wide at the first, also the second. He fanned on the next. Devore's first was a strike, followed by two wide ones. The third ball followed. He missed the next and fanned on the following.

Barry's first was a strike. He went out, Marquard to Merkle. Thomas drew two balls then went out, Fletcher to Merkle. Plank drew two strikes in succession and fanned on the following.

Doyle's first was a strike. Plank put the next one outside the plate. Doyle went out to Davis, unassisted. Snodgrass singled to left, and went out at second, Lord to Barry. Murray drew two strikes and a ball. Two more balls followed, and then he struck out.

Connolly called the last strike on him, he merely shook his head but put up no kick.

Lord, the first man up, flied out to Snodgrass. Oldring flied out to Devore. Collins doubled to left. Baker drew two balls, then he swung wide. He hammered out a home run, scoring Collins. The ball went clean over the fence. The crowd went wild. Murphy, who followed, got two strikes and struck out on the next.

Merkle singled to centre after piling up one strike. Herzog flied out to Oldring. Fletcher missed the first, likewise the second. A ball followed. He flied out to Baker. Meyers's first was a ball. Merkle was caught napping off first, Plank to Davis.

Marquard gave Davis two balls, which were followed by a strike. He flied out to Doyle. Barry drew a ball and a stirke. The next one went wide. He flied out to Herzog. Thomas flied to Fletcher after one strike.

Crandall started to warm up to take Marquard's place. Meyers, the first man up, drew a ball and two strikes. Plank again failed to find the plate and missed again on the next effort. Meyers flied out to Collins. Crandall went in to bat for Marquard, and went out, Collins to Davis, after one ball had been called. Devore drew a strike and a ball. He missed the next. He drew another ball and then he fanned, for the fourth time.

Crandall's first one to Plank was a strike. The second failed to find the plate, another wild one followed. The next was a strike and then Plank fanned on the next. Merkle muffed Lord's high foul. One ball and two strikes were called on the Philadelphia left fielder, who then struck out. Oldring's first two were strikes. Two balls followed and he went out, Herzog to Merkle.

Merkle fouled out to Thomas. Snodgrass' first was a strike. Snodgrass fanned. Murray drew a strike, followed by a second strike and went out, second to first.

MERKLE KEEPS AT HIS OLD POST ON FIRST BASE

By R. W. LARDNER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—New Yorkers were asking themselves one question this morning: "Can Christy Mathewson do it again?" It was certainly up to Matty to-day more than at any time in his long and wonderful career. If he could down the men of Mack in this, the third game and one of the most important in the series, there was still more than an even chance for the Giants to win out. But if Matty met defeat it means a sure lost of the world's championship honors for the Giants, who are depending on him and on him alone.

The New York athletes were not nearly as happy a lot when they awoke this morning to a realization of yesterday's happenings, they were pining over the possible loss of Fred Merkle, who is undoubtedly in terrible shape. His "charley horse" has bothered him ever since Saturday, and he was a veritable cripple in the battle at Philadelphia. Because of his clever work at first base Manager McGraw is loth to bench him, but it looked to-day as if it would be absolutely necessary. As a matter of fact it might be the salvation of the Giants. Merkle, in his present condition, isn't nearly as strong, either defensively or offensively, as when he is at his best. As his possible substitute, McGraw has Arthur Devlin, who lacks only experience at first base. There's no ball player in the country with a better knowledge of the game than this same Devlin. Undoubtedly he slowed up this year and wasn't able to field with his old-time smoothness. But Devlin is one wise head, and in addition he is a born fighter. He is never so good as in games which mean a lot. He has as much spirit as Larry Doyle, and is among the most dangerous batters in the National League in a pinch.

McGraw said this morning that he would use Merkle if the latter could stand on his legs, but added that he had lots of faith in Devlin. If the change is necessary, Arthur will hit fifth in the batting order between Murray and Buck Herzog.

This Herzog person, by the way, is playing beautiful ball in the series, barring Mathewson, he has been the bright light on the New York club, fielding his position like a demon, and hitting harder than any of his mates, although he has had little luck at bat.

The attendance at to-day's game will not be as large as at the opener, but it will probably surpass that at Philadelphia yesterday. The Philly crowd was a disappointment. One thing it proved conclusively and that is that somebody has been dreaming about regular-season attendance at Shibe Park. It will be remembered that throngs of thirty and thirty-one thousand were announced at two of the Athletics' battles with Detroit over six weeks ago, when the American League race was still hot. Well, every seat in the park was filled yesterday and there were several hundreds in the temporary stands around the outfield, and yet the official count was only a trifle over 26,000. The inhabitants of the Quaker burg can't kick against New York on the scalping proposition either. While there were probably fewer seats in the hands of speculators at Philly, the gamblers were charging higher prices for them and some of the out-of-town fans were putting up an awful howl.

Pray for Sunshine.

The ball players and the two owners, Ben Shibe and John T. Brush, are praying for another sunshiny afternoon. The weather prophets are not so certain about to-day. There never was a prettier day for a world's series battle than yesterday and everybody concerned will be lucky if the powers above come back with another.

It's comparatively easy to pick the pitchers for to-day's game. It doesn't require an expert to see that Mathewson will be in the box for the Giants when the scrap starts, and everything points to Coombs for the Athletics. The New Yorkers figure that they will have a much better chance against Jack than they had against Plank, for Eddie really pitched a superb game, and was wonderfully effective after the third inning. Coombs is inclined to be wild, and the Giants are good waiters. They made the mistake yesterday of waiting too much, for Plank had swell control, and it would have been policy to swing at everything that came over. McGraw was up against it. He knows, as does everybody else, that Josh Devore can't hit a left-handed pitcher. But he had no one to use as substitute for Josh except Beals Becker, a left-handed hitter himself, and therefore not much of an improvement.

It is McGraw's scheme to start Matty to-day, and also in the Thursday game here. If Mathewson wins to-day and thus gives the Giants a lead of one game it would not be at all surprising if Leon Ames worked to-morrow. Mack's program is Coombs to-day, Bender to-morrow and Plank on Thursday.

It looks now as if Stuffy McInnes wouldn't figure in this series at all. His wrist is still very stiff and sore, and he is almost heartbroken about it. Neither manager is very lucky about his first baseman, Mack being forced to use a man who has seen his best days, and McGraw to work a player who isn't in shape to perform.

In Line All Night.

The hundreds who stood in line all night at the Polo grounds presented a bedraggled appearance in the daylight with their clothes wet from the heavy murk in the atmosphere and their limbs cramped from the long vigil. It was estimated at 8 o'clock that there were about 3,000 fans around the park waiting for the gates to the bleachers to open at 9 o'clock.

Following the victory of the Philadelphians, interest in the outcome of the series became intensified and the fans looked forward this afternoon to seeing the crucial struggle in the world's title series fought out. "To-day's winner ought to cop the banner," was the refrain of the fans' talk as they bandied their expert views from the vantage point of bleacher seats.

It had been announced that if the weather necessitated postponement of to-day's game it would be played here to-morrow, and the game scheduled for to-morrow at Shibe Park would take place there on Thursday. As the games continue with the record-smashing attendance, it becomes more evident that an enormously higher record for receipts will be set this year. The total paid attendance for the two games played Saturday and Monday is $120,000, of which the players get 60 per cent., or $64,973.61; the clubs 30 per cent., or $42,316.74, and the National Commission $12,032.15. It was figured out to-day that the gross receipts for the series would aggregate $275,000. The record receipts were established in the Pittsburg-Detroit series, which went seven games two years ago, when $188,302.50 was taken in.

Series' Batting Averages.

The batting averages in the first two games give the Giants 1.775 and the Athletics 1.720, which shows that the Giants did better work with the stick. Disregarding the averages, Baker and Meyers have done the best individual batting, each winning a game for his team.

Despite the weather aspect, thousands of Quakers came to New York from Philadelphia to see the third game, bringing enough money to give a spurt to the battle which had been lagging. Practically all bets on both the series and to-day's game were made at even money.

Manager McGraw, in reiterating his confidence in his team to-day, took occasion to speak of Marquard's action yesterday in giving Baker his favorite style of pitched ball, thus allowing the Athletic third baseman to smash out a homer and win the game.

"Well, it's a tie now," said the Giant manager. "We are going to win this series. I do not believe that the Athletics will get another game. It was a trying test for Marquard, and I hope to give him another chance during the series. He pitched a good game, and it was just a misfortune that Baker should have hammered out that home run."

Connie Mack was brimfull of confidence to-day. "Don't be surprised if we solve Matty's famous fadeaway," said the Athletics' leader. "I do not believe that Mathewson will be able to repeat Saturday's performance again during the series. We have been shown everything that the Giants have in stock in the pitching, fielding and batting way, and we are ready to pitch into them in earnest now."

Athletics on a Special.

The same arrangements for the transportation of the Athletics as on Saturday were in effect to-day. Their special train was scheduled to arrive shortly before noon and quarters were reserved for them at the Somerset Hotel.

Ty Cobb, of the Detroit Tigers, in discussing the series to-day said: "The teams are evenly matched. That is evident from the way they have played against each other so far. Both have shown the batting that was expected of them. The Giants did not get a chance in the first two games to show their superior base running for the simple reason that they did not get on bases.

"Pitching against a hard hitting team like the Athletics is the most difficult work in big league playing and in my opinion Marquard did remarkable work to hold them down so well as he did."

GOTHAM FAN IS ARRESTED IN CLUB HOUSE AT PHILLY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Caught in a dressing room at Shibe Park yesterday morning a man, who first gave his name as Charles Wilson of New York, and later as Jack Johnson, narrowly escaped violence at the hands of about 1,000 fans when the report spread that he was a New Yorker who had been found plotting injury against several Athletic players to insure a New York victory to-day.

When the man was led from the park by two policemen, someone started the report that he had meant injury to the Mackmen.

The tale spread and in a few moments the policemen and their prisoner were surrounded by hundreds of howling, enraged fans. For a time it appeared as though violence would be done the prisoner, who was visibly frightened. The appearance of a detail of mounted police, however, forced the crowd back. Then, surrounded by about twenty policemen, the man was taken to Twenty-second street and Lehigh avenue, where a patrol wagon was summoned. He was locked up in the Twentieth and Berks Street Station.

At the station house he gave his name as Charles Wilson. Later he said his name was Jack Johnson. The police do not know whether he meant to see the game or whether he meant to steal any valuables that might be in the dressing room.

The stranger was seen crawling through a window leading into the dressing room assigned to members of the New York team.

WOULD-BE "SPEC" WHO GOT STUNG

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Mrs. E. F. Flynn, who has a boarding house in Chicago, reported to police headquarters yesterday that she was $1,500 out of pocket because of the failure of a former boarder to carry out a plan of speculation in tickets to the World's Series baseball games.

Mrs. Flynn, who is a woman of about sixty, says that her boarder showed her letters purporting to come from an official of the New York Baseball Club and pictured in glowing terms the possibility of making a small fortune in buying tickets for speculation.

She was impressed, she said, and agreed to come to New York with him. Shortly after their arrival Thursday she cashed a check on her Chicago bank and turned $1,500 over to the man. Since, she says, he has been missing.

15 TO 1 SHOT WINS.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 17.—Pimlico started its second week of racing yesterday with a beautiful day, a fast track and a large crowd. A surprise greeted the talent in the first race, when McLeod F., a fifteen to one shot, got home first, just beating out the hot favorite, Sunlike.

FRED TENNEY TO LEAD RUSTLERS

William Heyburn Russell, president of the Boston National League Baseball team, who visited this city yesterday for the first time since the close of the Rustlers' season on their home grounds, made the announcement that Fred Tenney would lead the Rustlers next season.

Russell, in speaking about the managerial end of the game, said: "Tenney will manage the team next year; that is my present understanding and expectation. I like Kling immensely and realize his value to our club, but we have a long Winter coming. I am going away soon, possibly to the West Indies, for a rest, and I am in no hurry to sign up anybody."

MASS. WOMAN WINS GOLD MEDAL

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Despite the soggy condition of the links and her unfamiliarity with the course, Miss Anita Phipps of the Springfield Country Club of Massachusetts, yesterday turned in the lowest card in the qualifying round of the first annual invitation golf tournament for the Berthlyn cup donated by Caleb F. Fox at the Huntington Valley Club at Noble, thereby winning the gold medal. Miss Phipps played excellent golf from the tee-off, getting two fours for the first two holes. At the turn she had a 44, which is considered good even when the going is good. One of the features of her playing came when she holed out the twelfth for a three after a ten-foot putt.

BUCK CROUSE AGAIN WINS FROM BERGER

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—Buck Crouse, the Pittsburg middleweight, who stunned the fistic world a few weeks ago by stopping Young Loughery in three rounds in Boston, made his local debut last night at the American A. C. and outpointed Billy Berger of this city in a six-round bout.

Crouse showed wonderfully in the first three rounds. He led with a straight left jab most of the time, which generally connected with Berger's nose. The latter did not seem to relish these blows as he has a weak nose. Crouse kept the claret flowing from that member all the time from the second round to the last.

Berger made a nice showing in the fourth round when he held Crouse even and in the last round when he carried off the honors.

BROCKTON TAKES FOUR POINTS ON ALLEYS

BROCKTON, Oct. 17.—In the first of two matches between bowling teams of the Commercial Club of this city and the Nantucket Athletic Club of Nantucket, the home team last night won four points. The Nantucket visitors came here for their annual visit as guests of the Commercial Club. The afternoon program was featured by a game between the two veteran bowlers of the two clubs, Medical Examiner A. Elliott Paine of Commercial and M. F. Freeborn of Nantucket. Dr. Paine won all three strings and put up a total of 477.

MARTIN SHERIDAN MAY LEAD NEW YORK TEAM

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The fight for captaincy of the Irish-American A. C., which will be decided at the club house December 5, took another turn to-day when Martin Sheridan announced his intention of running for the office. He is the candidate of many of the veteran athletes, and his friends say he will defeat both Frank Riley and Melvin Sheppard, the other candidates.

PITTSBURG BEARCAT TO MEET OLD RIVAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Two good bouts will divide the interest of New York fight fans to-night. Tom McMahon, the "Pittsburg Bearcat," will meet his old rival, Jim Smith of Westchester County at the Empire A. C., and "Montana Dan" Sullivan, the Western boxer, will clash with Frank Mantell of Providence at Brown's Gymnasium.

Meyers Says Straight Inside Ball Gave Athletics Victory

By JOHN "CHIEF" MEYERS.

The famous Indian catcher of the Giants who is writing his intimate impressions of the world's series exclusively for the AMERICAN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—We were beaten yesterday by the very thing that is going to win for us in the coming games, the baseball championship of the world—the wallop.

The team which has that—though I don't need to tell any fan such a plain fact—is bound to win. And to-day, by a break of the luck their way, the Athletics held it.

Everybody knows that the game was broken up in the fatal sixth inning by Frank Baker's home run drive over the right field fence after Eddie Collins had reached second on a double. Perhaps everyone wonders just how that came about. I probably know better than anyone else, being closest to the play. This is how it happened:

There were two out when Collins came up. Rube Marquard was working along as well as he ever did in his life. He had been a little bit nervous in the first inning but had settled down. We were both beginning to feel pretty confident, as we had tied them up in the second and the score was one, one. We were a bit nervous when Collins slammed an outcurve to left and got to second. Rube first fed Baker a lefthander, with what to him was a wide outcurve. That fooled him. He tried to reach it and couldn't.

Baker Hits Homer.

Then the big fellow gave him another almost like it, which looked as though it would be a bad one, but broke right over the centre of the plate. There was only the third strike to put over and we would be on easy street.

Marquard tried a fast, straight one, close inside. We know now—to our sorrow—that just such a ball is exactly what Frank Baker would call for if he were given his choice of a hundred different routes. I watched him swing back, then lunge forward and with the crack of the bat I knew that something was coming off. I looked out to right and saw the ball going higher and higher against the background of those brownstone houses on Twentieth street. It must have cleared the fence by ten feet. Then Eddie and Frank came loping across the plate, grinning from ear to ear.

Had Rube's pitch been another curve, or had the fast ones gone outside the plate, instead of inside, I believe Baker would have struck out, or at least hit weakly toward left. But when a pitcher is working against a strange batter not knowing what he likes, what can he do but take a chance with anything he has in stock?

Rube Marquard is a great pitcher and I am sure our supporters will agree with me that he was outlucked. He will come back and beat these fellows if he is sent into the box again.

In the clubhouse, after the game, and here in the hotel, anybody who saw the Giants could tell that we were not a bit worried about the final result. We were disappointed, of course, but we all still feel that we have it on the Athletics, although they certainly are a great ball team. And knowing them now I want to say that they're a fine, clean, gentlemanly lot of boys, too. But just wait till to-day at the good old Polo Grounds.

Meyers Gives Advice.

Right here I would like to make the suggestions to the New York fans. They might take a lesson in the art of rooting from their brothers over here in the Quaker city. I never heard such a racket in my life as the Philadelphia fans made yesterday. They had horns, strings of sleighbells, rattles, tinpans and all sorts of noise making things. And they kept yelling to their boys, cheering at the easy plays, and hurrahing every time Eddie Plank put over a strike on us.

That sort of thing helps to win ball games. Don't think we don't hear your yells from the stands. We do, and it not only helps us, but gets the other fellows' goats.

FRANK SCHULTE GETS HIS NEW AUTOMOBILE

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—With the Chicago American team leading the Chicago Nationals 3 to 0 in the fourth game of the city championship series yesterday, rain fell in torrents in the last half of the second inning, causing the game to be postponed. Having three victories to their credit, the American Leaguers expect to win to-day, thus ending the series.

Before the game, Schulte, the National outfielder, was presented with the National League automobile prize.

GOVERNOR DIX WON'T REGULATE BASEBALL

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Governor Dix is of the opinion, at present at least, that there is no need for State regulation of baseball, as has been suggested in view of the charges attached to the sale of tickets in New York city for the World's Series games. "Baseball is such a popular sport," said the Governor yesterday, "that public opinion should be able to regulate it."

MAKE THEM MAKE GOOD!

When we put our names to an advertisement, we expect to conform to every statement we make about the goods.

If you will read the advertising of some other tailors, you will find them making all sorts of fancy promises—most of the promises incapable of fulfillment.

In protection to ourselves—and in order that the public may be protected, we suggest that you insist that the tailor who gets you into his shop through advertising, "make good" on his promises.

If he offers to make a suit for $6.72 or an overcoat with raglan shoulders for $7.29, then order just what he offers to make and don't feel embarrassed when one of the salesmen attempts to bulldoze you into paying $20 or more for a regular $15 suit.

We have no grudge against reputable tailors or good clothing houses who sell something that is worth the money and treat their customers squarely.

But, as tailors who advertise suits at $15 to $25 and deliver them, we don't feel that we are getting our just dues from the public at large, when other tailors or clothiers advertise impossible and foolish bargains (?) for the sole purpose of getting customers into their shops, so that their salesmen can switch the customer onto some suit or overcoat that is only ordinary in value but very high in price.

We want your trade, but we don't care to have you walk over to 96 Court street with a wrong impression in your mind.

We want you to know before you start—that we are different from the other advertising tailors—that we get $15 to $25 for suit or overcoat—that we don't advertise anything else and never did—and if you come over here for a suit of clothes, you will pay the prices we advertise and nothing higher.

There may be other methods of attracting trade—but these are our methods and we are doing a very satisfactory business along these lines.

The school[illegible] football season has reached the stage of its important games. Beginning Saturday the school teams are down for hard games for the rest of the season and some merry battles should be witnessed.

The [illegible] teams [illegible] in rounding into shape this year, but several teams have now struck strides that will be hard to break. Unexpectedly the rules have bothered the players on nearly all of the teams and much time is [illegible] each game in [illegible] with the [illegible]. Boston Latin, the ante-season prediction, has failed to come up to expectations. The squad at the schools this season has been large and in practice looked like sure win[illegible] Medford [illegible] to defeat Newburyport and Rock Ridge [illegible].

Commerce Has Good Eleven.

[illegible] of foot[illegible] [illegible] a large gain during the season although they will likely defeat many of the teams on its schedule.

English has played good football, but it has yet to win a game. The Montgomery street team was just nosed out by a field goal by Brookline and held the strong Groton team down to six points and played Dorchester to a scoreless tie although outplayed.

Mechanic Arts has a good team and it expects to win the championship of the city.

It is noticed, with but a few exceptions [illegible] Waltham, Medford and Everett [illegible] when it came down [illegible] far as the offense is concerned the scoring is only [illegible] half of what the Waltham [illegible] up in the same number of [illegible] Waltham has a strong [illegible] forwards are [illegible] the best [illegible] of Greater Boston for the past few years. Many wonder[illegible] Medford [illegible] with a great record but the followers of the schoolboy gridiron games [illegible] that it will not win the title in [illegible] League over Everett. [illegible] has some good stars [illegible] the end positions, at quarter and centre and one or two of the backs are rated up among the best. Open work has been [illegible] feature of the Medford games, and this will remain its style of attack for the remainder of the season. The Medford line is weak, however, and the [illegible] of Everett or Somerville should be able to tear big holes with ease.

[illegible] schoolboy games are down on the schedule. Over a dozen games will be played and [illegible] good [illegible] Boston English High play Somerville High at Somerville. Last year the Blue and Blue team [illegible] up a 12 to 0 victory over the Red and Blue and all hands will fight hard to duplicate that feat.

Somerville has the greatest backfield [illegible] the Somerville forwards [illegible] too strong [illegible] Blue and [illegible].

Malden High and Newton will clash at Newtonville. These teams are about the same weight and evenly matched, and a hard game should be the result. Malden has shown up better than the Newton boys this season and are the slight favorites for to-morrow's setto.

GREEN PLAYING A FINE GAME

By R. G. KENEFICK.

That Dartmouth has a drop kicker who is to be feared by every opponent of the Green was shown in the Holy Cross game when Hogsett, the diminutive left halfback, booted two field goals cleanly from the thirty-yard line.

Both attempts were sent away quickly and the defence put up by the Dartmouth line was superb. Not a single Holy Cross player was able to get through to the kicker until the ball had sailed between the goal posts, so strong was the kick formation used by the Green line and backfield.

Although the showing of the Green against Holy Cross was not remarkable, it is conceded on all sides that Dartmouth has a team instilled with fighting spirit that will be heard from next month.

The score, 6 to 0, against Holy Cross, [illegible] two field goals, would make it appear that the Green was weak on offence. But it must also be taken into consideration that the Green was compelled to use its fourth, fifth and sixth string quarterbacks in the game, and this, of course, is a severe handicap to any team.

Green Coming Along Slowly.

Dartmouth's team is coming slowly. Up to last week Head Coach Cavanaugh, and his assistants, "Larry" Bankart and Joe Gilman, have been instructing the Green in the fundamentals of the game, and it was only just before the Holy Cross game that the team was taught the use of anything but old time football.

This week will see a fast development of the team, as the coaches will push the team to the limit from now until the end of the season.

Coach Cavanaugh has been up against it all season trying to find a quarterback who can remain immune from injuries for several weeks. Three quarterbacks have been developed this season and at the present time all are laid up with injuries, making it necessary to develop three more for that position.

Pishon Has the Call.

Pishon, a brother of the former Dartmouth quarterback, showed up remarkably well, and it looks as if he will have the call in the Williams game, providing the jinx does not pursue him and put him out of commission.

Winship and McCullough, two other quarterbacks, will also be developed, as the coaches are afraid of the hoodoo following the players in that position.

Llewelyn, the first string man, will probably not be in shape to play against Williams, but it is hoped that his sprained ligament will heal in several weeks.

Hogan and Wright, the sub quarters, are now laid up with bad sprains, and the coaches fear that neither of these players will be able to get into the game again this Fall.

Dartmouth's seven linemen are rangy enough to hold their own against any line in the country. The backfield, while rather light, are very fast.

Bad Fault With Players.

Hogsett is the individual star of the team, running low, as slippery as an eel and a brilliant dodger in the open field. The other back men are fast and form good interference for the runner.

The Green men followed too far behind their interference in the Holy Cross game allowing their opponents time to get in between the interference and intercept the [illegible]. But this fault will be fixed up this week by the coaches and Williams will find itself up against a fast team on Saturday.

That Holy Cross played a much better game against Dartmouth than against Harvard was the opinion of the Holy Cross [illegible].

It was also the opinion of the Worcester coach that the Green team put up a slightly better game against them than did Harvard.

Coach Steve Mahoney is grooming his team especially for Waltham next Saturday. Owing to the hard games played last week only light work was gone through yesterday, but all hands will be given stiff workouts to-day. Several new plays were tried out yesterday and worked nicely.

Coach Matthews is having a hard time in striking the right combination to carry the colors of Mechanic Arts through the [illegible] regular [illegible] game and several others are being tried out in his place. Hiro Power and Menadier were worked at that position yesterday. Shea, candidate for the backfield position, is running the team at quarter and Gleason, a linesman, has been put in the backfield. J[illegible], national amateur boxing champion at 105 pounds, was defeated in three rounds by Harry Karlson of Brockton last night at the inauguration of boxing in Quincy before the Quincy Athletic Club. Some twenty-five amateur bouts were staged.

TWO RECORDS ARE LOWERED

HANOVER, Oct. 17.—In an interesting inter-class track meet held yesterday, the freshman class carried off the laurels. Two college records were broken, Marceau, '14, lowering the college record for the two-mile from 10 minutes 4 seconds to 9 minutes 48 seconds, while Whitney, '15, put the shot a distance of 45 feet 2 inches. Llewelyn, the B. A. A. runner, and formerly of Colby Academy, was timed for 10 seconds flat in the hundred. One of the most interesting features of the meet was the relay race between the sophomore and freshman classes. The latter won on the last lap, in which Llewelyn beat out Olson after a hard fight. Considering the condition of the track and the low temperature, the meet was considered by Coach Hillman as very satisfactory. The entering class came up to the expectation of all.

SOX QUARTETTE TO SING AT BROCKTON

BROCKTON, Oct. 17.—Thomas J. O'Brien, Buck the pitcher, is as happy as a song-bird these days, so happy in fact that he is giving vent to his feelings by singing. Not only is Buck a great pitcher, but a great vocalist as well.

Buck's baseball and vocal abilities developed at about the same time and his singing is comparatively as good as his pitching, and Boston fans know what that means.

The great Red Sox star is known in this section as a vocalist of much class. And now that the baseball season is over the popular Buck is spending his leisure moments "tuning up."

Arrangements are in making for the presentation of The Red Sox Quartette and already rehearsals have begun. The singing four will consist of Larry Gardner, Hughey Bradley, Martin McHale and Buck.

JOHNNY CONNOLLY DRAWS WITH CANOLE

NEW BEDFORD, Oct. 17.—Johnny Connolly of Dorchester came near stopping Martin Canole's "come-back" by a knockout in the eighth round of their twelve-round bout here last night. From the fourth round on, Connolly outfought and outboxed Canole. Canole's generalship enabled him to go the distance. Connolly won from the spectators' view but the referee said draw. Connolly showed himself a clever two-handed fighter.

NO MORE BOXING FOR WOBURN FANS

Woburn is to have no more boxing exhibitions, the lid having been shut down yesterday by order of Mayor Murray. The local association, under whose direction the exhibitions have been held, had prepared a card of events for next Monday night, but the executive order being [illegible] the exhibition will not take place.

The exhibitions have attracted from out of town patrons of an undesirable character, the conduct of many of the visitors having been of such a nature as to arouse much criticism. The clergy and local newspapers denounced the exhibitions, and recently Rev. Father Keegan of St. Charles Church sent a protest to Mayor Murray.

Kersberg Will Assist in Coaching Crimson Guards

By TED PARKE.

The Harvard football squad is in for a long hard time behind the closed doors in the Stadium this afternoon, a tough scrimmage being scheduled in which a number of new plays will be tried out.

A decided improvement was noticeable in the Williams contest in the playing of the Crimson team, but hard work every day for the next couple of weeks will get the Harvard eleven into shape for the battles which will be fought all too soon to suit the coaches. There will, therefore, also be scrimmages to-morrow and Thursday and a rest for the team on Friday. The scrimmage this afternoon will be the hardest one of the week for the team was given an easy time of it yesterday as is the custom the first day of each week.

Harry Kersberg, the All-American guard of John Foster's team in 1906, has written that he will be with the squad to-morrow or the next day to help out with the guards, who at present have no regular coach except Paul Withington, who really should have charge of the centres. Kersberg has been on hand at various times in years past and his presence has always been beneficial to the men he has worked with.

Work Was Light.

The work for the team yesterday was very light. The usual long blackboard talk preceded the work on the field. When the men reached the Stadium two teams were picked and for an hour the two teams ran through dummy scrimmage, trying out several new formations which had been outlined to them during the blackboard talk. The long signal practice then followed and the men were dismissed after having been on the field about an hour and a half.

Captain Fisher did not lineup with his men, as he is bothered with a slight injury to his knee, which he received in the Williams game. It is nothing serious, however, and he will be back in scrimmage again to-day in all probability. Gardner, the quarterback who was injured several weeks ago, was out in his gridiron togs yesterday for the first time since his injury running through signals for a short time on the sub eleven. He will not be tried in actual scrimmaging this week, but will be given plenty of time to permit his knee to become sound. If necessary, however, he will be available for the Brown game a week from Saturday.

Manager Burgess of the Brown team which plays in the Stadium a week from Saturday was on the field yesterday in consultation with Manager Whitelock of the Harvard eleven, discussing the question of officials. He had nothing to say about the prowess of his team, but he looked [illegible] Saturday [illegible] afternoon. Most of the [illegible] was [illegible] work and kickers were given [illegible] attention. [illegible] as [illegible] Young Marquard and little Chief Meyers [illegible] of the Wild Cats had a [illegible] yesterday in "Shrimp" Flynn's [illegible] under the personal direction of "Shrimp" himself.

According to "Shrimp," his pitcher and catcher are going to perform like clockwork when they take their places to begin their struggle for the world's championship honors.

Little Chief Meyers declared last night that if any one steals a base on him he will eat "Skinny" Shaner's hat. As "Skinny" has the largest hat in the neighborhood, the Little Chief would not take the chance of making such a statement unless he were reasonably sure of being on the safe side.

On the other hand "Eaglebeak" Spruder and his catcher, Whizzlewhaz, the battery upon which the brunt of the Wasp's struggle for supremacy will fall, have dropped from sight. "Puggy" Mullane, captain of the Wasps, would give out no information as to their whereabouts. The only assurance that they will be on hand is that "Puggy" has bet three cigar boxes with "Shrimp" Flynn, his rival captain, that "Eaglebeak" will strike out more players than Young Marquard. We believe the bet is an even money proposition.

Skinny Shaner, manager and captain of the Starfish Giants, deserves a lot of credit for what he is doing. Instead of getting sore about losing out he has volunteered to build a brand new grandstand for the league. It is the largest that has ever graced the grounds, being a three sectioned affair. Besides the grandstand he dug up three boxes some place for the accommodation of particular fans.

A few tickets have already been printed by "Shrimp" Flynn and signed by President Umperes, but the demand for them has been so great that they were sold before the ink had dried on them.

Take a peep in to-morrow's paper for more dope.

The American Girl

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

NOWHERE in [illegible] wide world can be [illegible] find which produces [illegible] [illegible]ful and bright young girls as America.

[illegible] we are a composite nation, [illegible] generation of girls under twenty [illegible] the marked characteristics of [illegible] bloods.

There are few families in America to-day which have kept [illegible] branches strictly American.

[illegible] people have intermarried with Spanish, [illegible], Italian, French families, and our whole rank and file of middle and laboring classes are doing likewise, adding Swedish, Danish, Norwegian and Russian nationalities to the [illegible].

As [illegible] American young men and women are as varied in their types as flowers in a garden, and when we look in at a Summer resort function, anywhere in America, we are dazzled with the variety of beautiful faces we see, just as we are when we [illegible] armies of girls emerging from shops and factories and business offices in any of our large cities.

Here and there we will see the strictly American type and here and there we will find the family tree with no grafted branches, but it is the exception to-day in America.

Meantime, our country seems to keep its American ideas, and its American habits regarding the liberty allowed young girls. While foreign blood is [illegible] in their veins, yet foreign restrictions are lacking [illegible].

[illegible] girls were safe in the [illegible] and the chaperon was unknown.

She Is Not Safe.

To-day the young girl is not safe when allowed to go about freely and unprotected with young men.

It is [illegible] to see the childlike simplicity of the average American mother in [illegible].

A few [illegible] families who have [illegible] have [illegible] European ideas and rules and guard their young girls from too much liberty. But when we come to know facts regarding these few families, astonishing revelations come to light.

For instance, one beauty and belle in a large American metropolis met a man of the world at one of the first large balls she attended after her debut, and was [illegible] urging, to take [illegible] and friends [illegible] was [illegible] refreshments with a friend of the family.

The story (of course related by the man boastfully) came to the father's ears and the "friend of the family" was obliged to flee from one part of the world to another [illegible].

Such an experience could not have happened to a girl in any other country of the earth.

The American mother does not talk with her young daughter about the fundamental facts of life, and she allows her to grow up romantic, sentimental, egotistical, liberty-loving and pleasure-craving, and expects her own good sense and modesty to protect her.

That so many American girls do become [illegible] wives and mothers, and respected and respectable matrons, speaks well for human nature.

The High School Girls.

All over America young girls, from fourteen to nineteen, are seen daily going to and from High School unattended by any older person.

Not one parent in five hundred, it may be safely asserted, ever takes special care to know detailed happenings to the school girls on their way to and from school and after school hours.

If an American girl of sixteen tells her parent she wants to go home with a girl companion to dinner, or for the evening, she is rarely questioned for particulars, and she is seldom asked to tell more of her experiences while absent than that she has had "a perfectly lovely time."

At Summer resorts girls of fifteen and sixteen are permitted to walk and motor [illegible] go to parties with young men, and to golf, tennis and swim; and to lie on the sandy beach, for an hour or two afterward, unmolested by any older person.

Scores, yes, hundreds, of these girls pass unscathed through these experiences because they chance to associate with the youths who have been reared perhaps with sisters of the same type, and perhaps because of some inherent strength within themselves which enables them to elude danger.

But there are other scores who do not escape.

The tragedies which occur in American schools would fill volumes were they written down in plain recitals.

The parents are usually the last persons to suspect and the last to believe that their daughters have erred and when the awful facts are revealed to them they blame everybody but themselves.

Not one girl in one hundred who so errs in her early youth is naturally vicious or wrong minded.

They are simply ignorant of what life means—ignorant of the meaning of certain impulses, of certain emotions and of the results of such impulses and actions.

What are you doing, oh, mothers and fathers of America, to save your young daughters from imprudence, from folly, from indiscretion?

What do you, who read these words, absolutely know about the thoughts and actions of your young daughter?

What have you ever said to her to make her feel that she could come to you with every puzzling problem regarding her own nature?

And what are you going to say to her after you read this?

The Motorist

SPARKER and Plug had just returned from a glorious motor spin, and as they sat in Sparker's dining room they talked of many things, despite the noise of Sparker's offsprings who were playing in the apartment.

"Tell you what, Sparker," said Plug, "you've a fine healthy lot of children. By the way, how many of them are there?"

"Seven," said Sparker proudly.

"I know, I've often wondered," went on Plug, "whether you people with so many children have any particular favorites?"

"Well, no," answered Sparker hesitatingly—"that is to say, you know, we don't have favorites exactly, but, of course, you can't help being more interested in a 1911 model than in some of the earlier ones!"

Trouble Ahead

MRS. JENKINS had recently missed Mrs. Brady from her accustomed haunts, and, hearing some startling rumors concerning her, went in search of her old friend.

"They tell me you're working 'ard night and day, Sarah Ann?"

"Yes," returned Mrs. Brady. "I'm under a bond to keep the peace for pullin' [illegible] of hair out of that lazy husband of [illegible] and the magistrate said if I come afore him again [illegible] on the [illegible] he'd fine me ten dollars."

"And you're workin' 'ard to keep out of mischief?"

"I'm what? I'm working 'ard to save up the fine!"

OH, GRACIOUS!

HICTANER—By Jean de la Hire

The Man That Lived in the Water—One of the Strangest Stories Ever Written

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

THE opening scene of the story is laid in a mysterious house on the island of Cabrera. Fulbert, a Buddhist monk of the Tibetan Lama, arrives and is greeted by Oxus, another monk. These two have discovered a way to gain world power by placing the lungs of a fish in a man, enabling him to live under water as well as on land. Oxus expected his wife Bertha to give birth to a boy, upon whom the monk planned to experiment, but a girl is born instead.

Fulbert, however, goes to a Lamaist monastery in Spain and takes from Martha de Biguires her male infant born out of wedlock. The mother then goes mad.

Eighteen years later a mysterious person calling himself "The Unknown" notifies the various powers that unless they acknowledge him as their master he will bring them to his feet by blowing up their navies. The threats are not taken seriously, but finally several battleships of various countries are destroyed. Admiral Germinet, of a French squadron lying at Villefranche, is notified to take his fleet to the Straits of Gibraltar and join forces with a British fleet to block the Mediterranean against the "Unknown." In the French fleet is the torpedo boat Cyclone, commanded by Lieutenant Louis de Ciserat, whose friend is Ensign Sainte-Claire. While the two fleets are lying there several ships are destroyed by the "Unknown." A reign of terror sweeps the world. The "Unknown," however, posts an announcement of a truce for a month on a buoy in San Francisco Harbor.

The scene shifts back to Fulbert and Oxus, who are now in the island of Bou Ali, on the Arabian coast. They inhabit a mysterious grotto replete with wonderful electric devices, and also a subterranean chamber. "Hictaner," or the man fish, comes into the chamber and talks to Oxus and Fulbert by means of signals. The two monks wear wonderful diving helmets and garments made of silver scales. It appears that Hictaner by means of his marvelous amphibious powers, and the help of a torpedo, or bomb carrier, is enabled to travel under water at incredible speed. Severac, an engineer and also a member of the Lamaist order, is the inventor of the torpedo, but knows nothing of Hictaner. The two monks decide to impart their secret to Severac. Fulbert tells how Oxus experimented on apes until he produced one that could live in the water. Then he tells how Oxus married his (Fulbert's) sister, and it was decided that their first child, if a boy, should be the subject of their experiment to make a man fish.

Now Go On With the Story

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

PART ONE—(Continued.)

"THE child was born in time, but it was a girl. The mother died soon after, and because only a male would do, the little girl was spared, to grow up surrounded by all the love of which Oxus and I are capable.

"You are acquainted with her, M. Severac. As she was saved from the waters, we named her Moisette!"

At the sound of this name Severac trembled and flushed crimson. Fortunately Fulbert did not notice Severac's agitation, or he would have had good reason to wonder at it.

Severac knew Moisette most certainly. She was the charming young girl who was the fairy of the Lost Isle.

He had seen her just nine times since he came to the island, and from each of these meetings the engineer cherished the memory of a sweet pain, strangely like the first manifestation of love.

However, Severac soon came to his senses. He was about to make some light response, but Fulbert did not give him time.

The Experiment

"We needed a boy," Fulbert went on. "At that time I was engaged in a propaganda of the Lamaist religion in southern France.

"Among the converts were a rich and prominent family, whose daughter came to me in great despair—her lover, a young student in a neighboring town whose name I never knew, disappeared immediately.

"I promised to protect her if she would give me the child. She consented. I persuaded her parents to allow her to go into a prolonged retreat in the then recently established Lamaist nunnery.

"She bore a son, and returned to her family, undisgraced. Afterward she lost her reason and disappeared. I took the child to Oxus."

Severac shivered. He shot a look of admiring fear at Oxus, but the savant, his eyes still closed had the impassibility, the pallor, the stillness of marble. Fulbert's voice was raised once more:

"By certain processes which he had invented, Oxus placed the child in a state of catalepsy, made an incision, fitted into it the lungs and other respiratory organs of a young living shark. And for two long years he followed the progress of this grafted man animal, step by step."

"At the age of two years and one month, the child fish, the "Hictaner," could live in air or water provided that he did not spend more than forty-eight consecutive hours out of the liquid element.

"Therefore, he was much more aquatic than terrestrial. He was what I so terribly needed. ... M. Severac, do you need any further explanations?"

"No, sir," stammered Severac, stunned by the complacency with which Fulbert recounted these extraordinary things to him.

"Of course," said Fulbert, "your intelligence is keen enough to grasp it. I will proceed.

"When Hictaner was six years old I began the work of forming his mind, just as Oxus had formed his body.

"I taught him that two species of intelligent animals inhabited the earth—that which lived on ships and on land, and that which lived only in the water.

"I taught him that men and fishes had so preyed upon our species that there were but three left, one young and perfect, Hictaner, and two others, old and tired, but powerful because of their intelligence—Oxus and myself."

"But—real fishes?" asked Severac, beginning to take for granted the things whose consequences he had been observing for the past eight months.

"I taught him," Fulbert went on, "that the creatures of the sea were his little brothers just as quadrupeds and birds are the little brothers to men.

"I taught him, however, that he would often be obliged to defend himself against the voracious unintelligent animals of the sea.

"But above all, I showed him that his highest mission was to revenge his kind against the men of earth."

"Oh! Oh! I begin to see," exclaimed Severac.

"The purpose of this," continued Fulbert, "was to wrest back from them the supremacy of the globe for his own heirs.

"I especially put him on his guard against any men in diving costumes, who had for the moment the general appearance of men-fish. When he saw them near the shore, he was to fall upon them and kill them."

"But surely," cried Severac, his excitement growing greater, "he must have seen the bodies of shipwrecked men. He must have seen how they resembled you and Oxus, and that you were not able to live in the water any more than those drowned men had been."

"You don't understand," replied Fulbert.

"Hictaner has always seen us in diving costumes covered with silver scales exactly like his own. He has never come upon us in our human guise."

Another Invention

"But how do you talk to him?" objected Severac. "The human voice cannot penetrate a diver's helmet."

"What about science, though!" exclaimed Fulbert.

"Oxus invented a micro-telephone which carried our words beyond the mask, and made them penetrate Hictaner's.

"At the same time, Oxus invented a miniature apparatus for generating oxygen and absorbing carbon, which was attached to the inside of our diver's mask, and gave us breathable air for several hours without the necessity of using the customary tubes, which are so dangerous."

"And can Hictaner talk?" stammered Severac.

"We taught him to talk between the ages of three and six.

"At that early stage in his development, his mind was incapable of discovering the ruses by which we succeeded in showing him the motions of our lips without revealing our human identity."

"What language does he speak?" asked Severac.

"I taught him four, telling him that men, restless and superficial, had evolved many more, but that these alone were common to the two species. They were French, Spanish, English and German."

"Very good," said Severac. "Now I understand it all—and accept it!

"I understand how the Torpedo is managed. Of course, I had guessed that a man might lie on the deck and direct screw and rudder by means of the electric buttons. But how he breathed, ate and lived, I could never imagine. It all explains itself now.

"There is one thing more, though. What is Hictaner's life? Where does he live? What does he do hour by hour? That is a most interesting phase of the subject—though no more so than the others. Please go on. I am eager."

"I have nearly finished," said the priest.

"When Hictaner was fifteen he knew all the ocean and seacoast geography of the world, in so far as we had described to him the results of men's submarine expeditions.

"Little by little I sent Hictaner to search for the great treasures strewn along the coasts of Spain and Portugal by battles and shipwrecks.

"At the same time I was bringing together, from the four corners of the globe, sixty of my brother priests and monks in the Buddhist faith. They were to form the nucleus of my society."

Stung

MR. NEWED (the week before his birthday)—Good gracious! Here are six boxes of cheap cigars my wife has evidently bought me for a present. I couldn't possibly smoke such vile things, and still I wouldn't like to hurt her feelings by refusing. I'll just substitute six boxes of my best Havanas and throw these cheap ones away before she returns.

Mrs. Newed (the day after)—Oh, Tom, I bought six boxes of cheap cigars yesterday for my dear Uncle Jonas, the sea captain, who lives in Salem. I have just posted them to him. They only cost me a dollar a box, but I'm sure he won't be able to tell them from good ones. Why, how funny you look, dear! Are you ill?

HE KNEW

A teacher was endeavoring to instil in to the mind of a thick headed youth the difference between linear, square and cubic measure. After a lengthy explanation he asked him the following question:

"Now, Freddie, suppose your mother wished to take the measurements for a new carpet, what measure would she use?"

After a great deal of anxious deliberation the lad answered:

"If you please, sir, a tape measure."

SOME CLASS

"My boy John writes me that he is stoppin' at the best hotels," remarked Mrs. Corp.

"Is he a commercial traveler?"

"No. He's drivin' a parcels delivery wagon."

Running an Engine

By THOMAS TAPPER

MEN in the mechanical sciences are devoting much thought these days to preventing leakage of power. Nearly every piece of mechanism delivers for manufacturing use only a small percentage of the actual power generated. The greater part of it escapes, and yet it costs just as much to produce the power that escapes as to produce that which is used directly for the purpose of manufacture.

It has been shown that unnecessary projections on the sides of railway cars destroy energy by presenting surfaces that resist the atmosphere when the train is running at high speed. Car builders are removing them.

By studying the air resistance of a large flywheel thirty horsepower additional energy has been secured.

Only a small proportion of the heat energy of a ton of coal is secured; the greater part escapes up the chimney. And heat conservation is a very practical question to which men are devoting the most careful thought.

Wasted Mental Effort

What is true in the mechanical sciences is equally true in the science of life. We are all of us, great wasters of power. We neither think nor act directly, but in a roundabout way that costs more in effort than we get in return.

We should become more thoroughly familiar with ourselves as machines, more capable of direct and incisive action. Every man and woman is the engineer of a physical and mental engine that is more delicate than any piece of machinery ever made. It excels in the work it can do, in endurance and in efficiency; but not until the engineer back of the mind and body has studied the nature of the machine, knows how to direct it, and stops leakage of power.

Taking the twenty-four hours of the day as a unit, this physical and mental engine of ours works comparatively little. Setting aside hours for sleep, meals and relaxation, there is only a small balance left. This small balance of time should be made the most of.

Even knowing that power is always being wasted, the engineer would never dream of treating the locomotive as we treat our far more powerful human machine.

Some Preventives

If he is even a halfway decent engineer he will do these things:

He will keep the machine scrupulously clean.

He will look it over before the day's run begins, to be sure that it is in proper shape and capable of its best work.

He will keep the firebox free, so that combustion will be easy and most efficient.

To generate steam he will use water, and nothing else. Water does the business other liquids do not.

When he starts on his run he knows that his job is to keep on the track and make time. This does not apply to the early morning hours alone, but to the whole day. The last station, like the first, must be made as per schedule.

All these things, and many more, an engineer does. That is why he is called an engineer.

But the moment we turn from the locomotive and its engineer to Claude Montgomery of the Avenue, what do we find?

First, that Claude has been provided with an engine so much more delicate and marvellous than a railway locomotive that there is no comparison. And that is generally all you do find.

The Decorative Engine

Does Claude attend scrupulously to his engine?

Not much further than hanging bunting on it in the morning. This gives it a gay appearance as it moves down the promenade, say, at a one-horsepower gait.

But in that engine of Claude's the Creator has put an unlimited horsepower. Claude should have been told that when he was being educated. He may have been regarded as letter-perfect when he recited his lesson on the battle of Austerlitz; but that is not power, it is coal to be stored on the tender. The trouble with it is, however, that it has been left on the tender, with a lot more like it, and never shovelled into the firebox.

Claude's ignorance of his engine is not his fault altogether. He was handicapped at the beginning by being loaded up with stuff, called knowledge, that he does not know to convert into energy. The engine and some sort of fuel are before him, but he really does not know how to kindle the one in order to make power for the other.

Rules of Power

But, bad as his case is, he can still do this. He can say to himself:

I will keep my body in as fine condition as possible.

I will use some of my mind to do my business well and directly, and the rest of it to learn something else.

I will never be so unreasonable, with either mind or body, as to make them act in a manner contrary to their purposes.

This is not much, but it is something and, by doing it, Claude's one-horse power gait will run up to ten or so, because he has stopped that one thing the mechanical scientists are working on—the leakage of power.

A Financier

FREQUENTLY the teacher had confiscated candy from young William. Apparently his fond parents spoiled him by allowing him too much pocket-money, and one day she questioned him on the subject.

"How is it, Willie," she asked, "that you always have money to waste on candy?"

"I earn it," said Willie proudly.

"Earn it! How?"

"By taking medicine. Pa gives me ten cents for takin' a bottle of some kind of oil, and ma gives me ten cents for takin' a bottle of somethin' with iron in it, and I'm going to get grandma to give me another dime for takin' a quinine pill every night for a month. P'r'haps she won't and then I'll let pa give me a penny a day for takin' malt, or something of that sort. That's how you earn money, teacher!"

The Apple Trade

TWO piles of apples lay upon the ground. One contained a large-sized and rosy specimen, the fruit of the other was green and small.

"Large on top, sir, and small at the bottom?" inquired the new assistant of his master, as he prepared to fill a barrel.

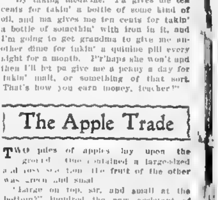
"Certainly not!" replied the farmer, virtuously. "Honesty is the best policy, my boy, and one I've always held to. Put the little apples at the top and the large ones at the bottom."

The assistant complied. His master was evidently as green as his greenest fruit.

"Is the barrel full, my lad?" asked the farmer.

"Yes," answered the assistant.

"Good!" said the farmer. "Now turn it upside down and label it."



Oh! the humiliation of it!

Our Methods With Superfluous Hair

ERADICO is guaranteed to instantly remove superfluous hair.

ERADICO doesn't singe the hair or burn it off. It dissolves it. It won't make your hair grow in faster as is the case with powders and pastes that break off the hair.

ERADICO can do all it claims, because it is a liquid that is absorbed by the pores of the skin. Powders, pastes and other chemicals that cannot be dissolved must remain on the surface of the skin and are therefore so disappointing. It is impossible for them to destroy the root of the hair.

Get a bottle of ERADICO, it is the only hair remover with a guarantee.

You can get ERADICO in Boston at all Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, Houghton & Dutton and other department stores and drug stores. We warn you against attempts at substitution. See that you get "ERADICO," the liquid depilatory, in the yellow package.

It was nothing to the scenes this grim prison enclosure had witnessed. Gomes was in a pleasant mood, and the boy had shown no fight, but to the woman who had stared at him it was the most appalling thing she had ever seen. If in that fetid tree-belt she had felt that she stood at the mouth of hell, here was its heart.

With a cry that drowned the fierce whish of the descending whip, she flew on the Portuguese and wrested the weapon from his hand—the long, flexible thong cut the air like a sword, and, descending, caught Gomez across the face and throat.

Gomez for the moment was completely taken aback by this sudden attack. She had caught him by the collar and the grasp of her slender hands, convulsed by passion, was not easy to shake off. Her blow had drawn blood; the thong, sharp as the edge of a knife, had cut his face slightly through the eyebrow, and blood dripped into his eyes—it was through it that he looked at the avenging fury burst suddenly into the midst of his private pleasure house.

The Scene in the Stockade

"You brute! You cowardly brute!" Kitty's voice was hoarse with anger. Her sun hat had fallen off, and her habit was wrenched and torn by the thorns through which she had scrambled, but she looked beautiful in her fierce indignation; her eyes were aflame in her proud, white face.

She could have brought down the whip again, for passion had lent her a strange strength, but some one coming behind her wrenched it from her grip and flung it away.

She turned furiously. It was John Martindale.

"Kitty! What's this! What are you doing here?" There was almost a light of amusement in his sleepy blue eyes as he looked from her disheveled figure and angry face to the discomfited, scowling Portuguese, who was wiping the blood from his face with a shaking hand.

For the moment no one had a glance for the motionless figure of the boy at their feet, his narrow, slender back, scored by long stripes.

With a broken, gasping voice Kitty told him what had happened.

"This fiend, Jack . . . what does it mean? How long has he been acting like this and we have known nothing?"

Martindale bent down and picked up her hat, that had fallen by the side of the motionless boy. The movement occupied him a moment longer than it need have done. He stared at the boy with a long, curious look.

Interfering With Discipline

"It means that you should adhere to your own advice, and leave people who understand 'em to deal with native rebels, Kitty," he said. "This outbreak of yours will have done incalculable harm. There has been trouble of a serious kind up here the last week . . . an example had to be made. Now this"—he touched the body with the toe of his riding boot contemptuously—"will add fuel to the flame, instead of quenching it."

His words seemed to quell Kitty's anger to something very cold and quiet; the flame died out of her eyes, leaving them curiously aged. She took her hat from his hand and looked round her slowly.

"Trouble of a serious kind—from what?" Her lips moved, but Martindale did not hear her words. "From what?" she repeated.

"From this?" Her eyes took in all the scene; the crowd of villagers, ill-fed looking, hideously terrified, their thin necks scarred as by the marks of chains, their bodies not glistening and sleek, like those of the servants to whose semi-nakedness she had become pleasantly accustomed, but dull and flabby and wrinkled . . . What crime had they committed before the memory of which they cowered with rolling, frightened eyes? Or what crime had been committed against them before the memory of which they cringed?

A Woman's Tenderness

Kitty had known heart-sickness before but never as she knew it now—rising up in great waves, making a blackness of the sun

There was only one out of the crowd huddled against the palisade like sheep who exhibited no fear in the sense that the others exhibited fear. A woman, less hideous than the others, with some poor pretense of ornament in her scanty cotton attire—the woman whose screams had drawn Kitty to this place. She was afraid, it is true, but her fear was for the boy who lay between Kitty and John Martindale. Her poor breast was convulsed with grief; her face bled, some one had silenced her scream by a brutal blow across the mouth.

Kitty moved toward her and said a few words in her own language. The woman nodded, clasping her hands. Then, at a gesture from Kitty, she darted forward, and catching up the body of the boy in her arms, dashed with him out of the place.

No one raised a hand or a voice to detain her—not the scowling Gomes, not the sentinel at the door.

But John Martindale, looking after her gave a short laugh and turned to his wife.

"You're a hopeless disciplinarian, Kitty," he said.

The Difficulty of Speech

The broad glare of the sunset filled all the sky as they rode home in silence, the level light turned the vast plain of waving grass to a golden sea; the distance lengthened—the long, gaunt line of the imprisoning hills had receded, but they stood out with a marvellous distinction against the skyline, purple and rock-strewn.

For Kitty, speech was not possible, and the man waited for her to take the initiative in this matter, as she had done in others. That was his frank, unabashed frame of mind.

He rode very stiff and straight, and the melancholy profile was sharply silhouetted against the glare. Once Kitty glanced at him strangely, inquiringly, as she might have glanced at a stranger. Then she touched her pony with her heel and pushed ahead of him at a canter. She could not bear to look at him, he was as monstrous and inhuman in her eyes just then as the immense shadow that he threw, as of a giant on square stilts.

But on the veranda, when they had reached the bungalow, and the boy had led away the ponies, she turned and spoke to him. It was as though she could not bear to enter the place that was their home with this stranger who seemed to have no kinship with the man she loved—with the boy friend of Wyndfiete days—this man who had laughed at the sight of a mother's grief over the body of her tortured child.

"What Does It Mean?"

"Jack . . ." The familiar name clung to her lips; she almost fancied there was still that flicker of laughter in her eyes. "What does it mean?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"That's a question Saxe could have answered more easily than I can, Kitty," he said. "But I can tell you this—it does mean all that your morbid imagination pictures."

"Morbid imagination—the horror of it leaves me dumb!"

He turned away with an irritable movement and stood staring out over the garden where the hibiscus blazed in the sun. He felt a rising anger that theratened to overwhelm him. Why was Kitty adopting this attitude toward him? Was he responsible for the nameless state of things he had discovered at Nokyoro—for the ugly secret Saxe had hid so successfully from his wife

Of course, he did not like Gomez—the man exceeded the limits of his authority occasionally; but Gomez was indispensable. He had come only a few days after Martindale himself—the overseer Saxe had installed had died of fever—or of some nameless disease that sometimes Martindale suspected to have been Nemesis—Gomez, engaged by correspondence had come over from French territory; he had had experience in the Congo also, and he had succeeded Martindale unquestioningly as his master.

Martindale Makes Excuses.

Martindale, standing there, was full of excuses for the man his wife hated, and that remnant of the real John Martindale detested also; but between the new man born in the tent in the forest on a night not so long ago, the man who had taken on him John Saxe's sins as well as his personality, and the Portuguese half-caste, there was an ugly bond of kinship.

To the woman watching him there was something terrifying in his immobility. A fear began to creep up over her heart that drove out all other feelings, anger and pity. What if in very truth she should find this man a stranger to her when he turned? What if she had lost by any words or action of hers this man she loved, for whom she had sacrificed so much?

"Jack"—she laid her hand on his arm, pressed her face against it—"can't we go away—if not to England, to Europe—anywhere out of this terrible country? I am growing afraid"—

She was afraid. Fear came rushing over her—fear of the loneliness, fear of those mad lusts of cruelty and evil that this African loneliness breeds. Suddenly the place seemed to stifle her. Her fingers pressed his arm eagerly. She had longed for solitude—but never as she longed now for the society of her kind. They must get away to some place before satiety set in.

Martindale threw off her hand almost roughly.

"Don't be a fool, Kitty!" he said. "It's too late to be afraid now. This is our world—we've made it for ourselves—and we've got to make the best of it."

He strode into the house, leaving her there alone.

Then as she stood there thinking, she heard suddenly her husband calling to her with a quick throb of excitement in his voice.

"Kitty—Kitty, there's an Englishman riding up from the hills; see, you can see him from this window here."

And, even as he spoke, raising herself on tip-toe on the step of the veranda, she could see over the lantana hedge, far distant yet, but coming ever nearer, the figure of a mounted man, and behind him the long, sharp shadows of his bearers.

Martindale joined her. His face had gone a yellow shade of white, and the sweat stood out preceptibly upon him.

"Who can it be?" he asked, in a shaken voice, and then "This is your no-man's land, Kitty! I knew what the end must be. What a fool I was to ever imagine for a moment that your madcat scheme could end in anything but disaster."

Kitty shivered. In spite of herself his cowardice disgusted her.

"Pull yourself together, Jack," she said, sharply. "If there is anything to be afraid of—you have got to face it—like a man."

The cries of the boys told them that the stranger had already been sighted. With an effort Martindale obeyed the [illegible] of his wife's words, and with his hand under her arm, went down the steps [illegible] the veranda to meet their visitor.

Martindale's alarm and Kitty's courage—both had alike been needless.

That was what Kitty thought as she looked across the shaded dinner table at the guest who had come so unexpectededly into their lives.

Laurence Baring, the man who had come out of the unknown, startling John Martindale into that unexpected exhibition of cowardice, had no connection with the shadowed past. He came from the coast with letters of introduction to John Saxe, a young Englishman gathering materials for a book on West Africa, a stranger who knew nothing of John Martindale, the obscure missionary who had died and been buried in the forest, a north-countryman with no knowledge of Martindale's part of England.

He was young, about twenty-three, Kitty thought, and good looking in a typically English way, and he was full of a fresh, boyish enthusiasm that she found exhilarating.

The Visitor from England

She looked across the blood-red pointsettias and the flames of the hibiscus flowers that decorated the table at her husband, and found herself contrasting him with this fresh English boy, whose fair skin seemed hardly tanned as yet by the African sun. Martindale was burned a deep, hard brown, against which the golden brown of his head looked in the lamplight almost straw colored. The tan had accentuated the blue of his eyes, but had not deepened it; they had a bleached and weary look, as though the sun had tired them intolerably; they had something of that ageless look one sees in the eyes of the very old—the thought stung her bitterly—when she had met him that first morning in the gold and white dining room of the Emperor's he had looked hardly less of a boy than this one to whom he spoke.

AUTO MEN DINE AND SEE CARS

By J. C. KERRISON.

J. S. Harrington & Co., New England distributors of the Everitt motor-cars, acted as host last evening to the members of its selling forces in Boston, Providence and Worcester, as well as to a number of well-known men.

It was at 6 o'clock that the party assembled at the Boston salesroom of the company, at No. 589 Boylston st., where an examination of the 1912 line and the salesroom was enjoyed. Later the party adjourned to the Hotel Lenox, where, with Mr. J. S. Harrington in the position of host, it enjoyed a most excellent dinner. The evening was spent informally; everyone was made to feel at home, and nothing was lacking to contribute to the pleasure thereof.

During the evening J. S. Harrington introduced J. E. Thompson of Worcester, who, by the way, bought the first six-cylinder Everitt car sold by the Harrington company, and who gave a most interesting talk on the Everitt line and "Why I bought an Everitt '6.'" It was a heart-to-heart talk from the purchaser to the salesman, interesting in the extreme, and full of talking points that should prove advantageous to the salesmen in approaching other customers.

It is the custom of the J. S. Harrington Company to assemble once a month for lunch and discussion by its New England selling forces, and the October meeting, held last evening, was somewhat of a departure, as besides the selling force the company had invited others to meet and mingle.

Gathered around the table were: J. E. Thompson, S. C. Harrington, Elmer Loring, D. A. Harrington, Henry Greene, Walter Sessions, W. B. Clarke, H. H. Clarke, P. A. Callahan, Captain G. H. Hill, H. G. FINISHED ACTING BY IRISH PLAYERS

"The Playboy of the Western World" at Plymouth Big Hit Despite Interruptions.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

When "The Playboy of the Western World" was produced in Dublin four years ago it aroused opposition that developed into rioting and other violent expressions of public disfavor. Many of the people of Dublin would not accept a play that made a hero of a parricide.

The first performance of this play at the Plymouth Theatre last evening by the Irish Players carried a small echo of Dublin's displeasure in the shape of several noisy persons in the upper gallery, whose hisses and groans proved no match for the applause that grew in other parts of the house. J. M. Synge's play moved serenely through its three acts, with only occasional interruptions—and there was no rioting by indignant citizens. As a matter of fact, the foul deed and its glorification that so bitterly offended Dublin playgoers was less brutal, when viewed in the comedy sense that Synge intended, than many a dark moment we have been compelled to sit through in modern melodrama. There was no occasion for alarm, and except for the few scattered partisans who groaned without knowing why, everything was lovely and sweet. The disturbers retired to the street and made faces at the theatre.

Of course, it is asking a good deal to expect us to believe that the dull people in such a remote Irish settlement as Mayo would actually glorify the murder of an old man by his son. The coast of Mayo may have been a gloomy, unhappy spot when Synge wrote this play, but it is doubtful if the God-fearing people of the place could really discover heroics in such bloodthirsty business.

But Synge was really telling another story—the story of a desperate deed that grew into something gallant and worthy as the details were retold with added trimmings. It was the first bold act of a tyrannized youth and his own satisfaction at having developed sufficient courage to rebel against parental oppression that preyed persistently upon his imagination. To the romantic young women of Mayo the boy became a hero—not because of the supposed crime, but because of his courage in attempting it. The sudden reappearance of the father robbed the hero of the fruits of his victory, for the old man was a stern customer who knew his son's weakness. A second attempt to end his father's life put the finishing touches on the boy's career as a hero, for as one of the characters explained it, there is a wide difference between a "gallows story" and a "dirty deed."

Fred O'Donovan played the "hero" with conviction, and Eithne MaGee was as pretty a Irish maid as man ever courted. The play was acted in the same brilliant style that has characterized all of the labors of the Irish Players, with J. M. Kerrigan, Arthur Sinclair, Sara Allgood and Sydney J. Morgan contributing excellent support to Mr. O'Donovan and Miss MaGee.

W. B. Yeats' one act play, "Kathleen Ni Houlihan," was also presented. In this work Miss Allgood distinguished herself.

Shubert Theatre.

A "play of thrills" is the very best description of "The Warning," a play in four acts, which was given its first metropolitan performance at the Shubert Theatre last night before a large audience. A delicate problem has been most carefully and effectively handled by Arthur J. Eddy, the author.

Miss Doris Keane, who takes the leading role, is paving her way to a wonderful future. She is a most painstaking, superbly attractive young woman and she won her way into the heart of everyone in the audience last night by her great portrayal of the difficult role of the innocent, unsuspecting girl, who falls in love with a handsome man of unscrupulous motives.

"The Warning" might well be called a melodrama. There are not the heavy, cumbersome trappings of the "heavy," but more the simplicity but intense and thrilling moments of "Secret Service" or plays of the William Gillette type.

The scenes of the play are laid in Seattle. King Conway, a well-known gambler, has a half-sister named Tress, who has none of her brother's traits. She is a beautiful girl in her teens, who, unfortunately, meets Prag Bicester, a polished denizen of the underworld.

Bicester is clever enough to cover his real opinion of women, and the girl falls in love with him. One evening they attend a ball, after which Bicester suggests that she go to his apartment for a late supper.

The girl consents, but once in his apartments she soon realizes that she has made a mistake. The situation is relieved by the sounding of the burglar alarm in the room.

Bicester places the girl in another room, turns off the lights and awaits the coming of the intruder. The thief makes his way to the safe, when he is knocked down by Bicester and the lights are switched on, revealing the girl's brother, King Conway.

Miss Keane is very ably assisted. Both Bicester and King Conway are excellent bits of acting. Her support included Conway Tearle, Edmund Elton, George C. Staley, Joseph Greene, Robert B. Kegerreis and Henry Hallam. The play is beautifully staged.

Keith's Theatre.

Mme. Sumiko, the famous Japanese prima donna soprano from the Imperial Opera House, Tokio, tops the bill at Keith's Theatre this week, and her act is one of the most pleasing that has ever been staged in Boston. Mme. Sumiko has a sweet and wonderful voice, and from the moment she strikes the stage until she leaves holds her audience enthralled.

"Cherry Blossoms," her first song, is sung in her native tongue. "The Garden of My Heart" follows, and then comes a selection from "The Geisha" and "Con Kena," both of which are sung in English. Another selection from "The Mikado," "The Moon and I," also sung in English, precede the big hit of her act, "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Mme. Sumiko's costumes are a treat and the scenic settings for the various songs are both quaint and beautiful. B. S. Takaori, the musical director of the Imperial Opera House and composer of "Cherry Blossoms," conducts the orchestra while she sings.

The Charles Kellogg act ranks high on the bill. His singing of bird songs is nothing short of marvellous, and he is evoking much applause from the large audiences. Carlin and Penn, the German comedians in "Getting a Divorce," have as funny an act as has been seen here in a long time.

Bud and Nellie Helm, who rank among the foremost juvenile comedians in the land, have a different line of comedy which is making a big hit everywhere. Paul Dickey, at the head of a company of five in a sprightly college skit, entitled "Come-Back," is worth seeing more than once. Joe Morris and Charles Allen, the men with the pipes, give everybody the laughing habit.

There is something for the children on the bill. Hickey's comedy circus furnishes a lot of amusement, and the little ones are particularly strong for Obey, the unbridlable mule. The rest of the bill includes Les Mountfords, European novelty acrobats, and the R. A. G. trio, who specialize in good music. The pictures are up to their usual high standard of excellence.

Castle Square Theatre.

It is seldom that a professional thief warns his victims of his intended visit and then fulfills his intention. This, however, is what Arsene Lupin, the "gentleman thief," does in the play of the same name, now appearing at the Castle Square. It is a play out of the ordinary, and throughout the entire production the audience is kept in suspense.

It is mystifying to the end, and not until a few minutes before the curtain drops in the last act does the audience know just who Arsene Lupin is. Opposed to the greatest of French crooks is Guerchard, a famous detective. Every climax sees these two men facing each other, the thief tantalizing, the detective positive, but without sufficient evidence.

The scenes of "Arsene Lupin" are laid first in the country and Paris homes of one M. Gourney-Martin, a wealthy Frenchman, the last scene is laid in the thief's own rooms.

Asene Lupin, who is disguised as a nobleman, infatuates the daughter of M. Gourney-Martin, and through her he ascertains the plans of her father's home in Paris. A telegram is received by the family in which it is stated that Arsene Lupin will rob the house on a certain evening. The Paris police are notified. Detective Guerchard is detailed on the case, and goes to the house, where he waits for the thief.

Lupin arrives, and the detective and thief make preparations to catch the thief, the detective now knowing that Lupin is the writer of the telegram. The scene which follows is dramatic.

Boston Theatre.

"If you go for to monkey with my
Lulu-girl,
"I'll tell you what I'll do.
"I'll shoot you with my pistol and
"I'll stick you with my stick-knife too."

Thus, or something after this fashion, sang Owen Wister's Virginian. If it was Lulu Glaser he referred to, no one could blame him for his bloodthirsty sentiments. With an efficient company she presented, for the first time in English, the Viennese comic opera, "Miss Dudelsack," at the Boston Theatre last night. And when the curtain fell, Boston had fallen in love with Miss Glaser all over again.

Miss Dudelsack is one of those rare productions in which there is a plentitude of good singing and graceful dances and, at the same time, distinct symptoms of a plot, an entire absence of slapstick humor, and a little honest pathos. When you go to see it the first few minutes of the first act will bore you, but intermission time will find you strong for "Miss Dudelsack," or we miss our guess.

The singing is splendid. Miss Glaser charmed in every number, and the trio in the second act, "Wealth, Beauty and Power," although Miss Glaser did not sing in the number, was delightful.

Globe Theatre.

"The White Sister," a romantic drama in four acts by the late F. Marion Crawford, is the offering at the Globe this week. It is a drama of love and duty, having the atmosphere of Italian convents and the quick, startling pulsations of the battlefield. From the very start the production is full of pathos, and the inspiring struggle of a woman, who is fighting against herself for the right. Many complications help to heighten the action.

The portrayal of Sister Giovanni by Miss Catherine Countiss was well received and shows that Miss Countiss has the abilities of a great emotional actress. Mr. J. A. Smythe as Lieutenant Ugo Severi, the wounded officer, did very well, while David Proctor's impersonation of Captain Giovanni Severi, the soldier lover, was equally as good.

Doris Keane in "The Warning" and Lulu Glaser in "Miss Dudelsack" Win Applause.

Other roles were taken by Miss Anna Berger Price as the portress of the convent; Miss Alice Adams as Madame Berlard, William Bedford as Lieutenant Basili, George C. Gunther as Doctor Pieri, Miss Isabell Sherman as Countess Chiaramonte, John M. Sullivan as Monsignor Saracinesca and Frederick Roberts as Bresca.

Gaiety Theatre.

Something new in burlesque was found at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday in Joe Hurtig's "Taxi Girls." There was a snap to the entertainment that made it distinctive, and the Farrell-Taylor trio, one of the features of the show, contributed a real novelty to the performance. Of course, there was a splendid assortment of pretty girls in stunning costumes and attractive song numbers. The Gaiety will play to crowded houses all the week.

Grand Opera House.

Richard J. Jose, of popular-ballad fame a full decade ago, scored one of the greatest successes of a long and successful career, in "Silver Threads" at the Grand Opera House last evening. If this old-time singer ever had passed into the "has-been brigade," his charming rendition of "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "Girl of My Dreams," "Daddy" and that world-wide favorite, "Home, Sweet Home," makes him the king of all "come-backs" in the theatrical business to-day.

"Silver Threads" is a pretty, four-act rural play, written by Martin V. Merle. It deals with the old story of a trusting maiden, who, in this instance, had left her country home to study voice culture in Boston and was snared by an unscrupulous suitor. Her betrayal follows, she is cast out by her father, but ten years later returns to her home as Mme. Pauline, a noted opera singer, where she foils the machinations of her former suitor by saving her younger sister from a like fate.

Mr. Jose takes the part of "Uncle Ben," and occupies the centre of the stage during the greater portion of the intensely interesting play, from the time the maiden's implacable father turns her adrift to the moment her false lover is unmasked at a church charade social in a fine climax. He was given good support by the remainder of the company, the part of Ruth Laurie, the erring daughter, being especially well interpreted by Miss Anne Hollinger, the heroine of the play.

National Theatre.

A rattling good bill at the National Theatre drew a crowded and enthusiastic house last night. There were a number of excellent features. Jack Haskell and his New York company of pretty dancing girls were especially well received, in their musical comedy, "Echoes of Broadway." Mr. Haskell and Mae Murray were splendidly supported by a large chorus of pretty girls in glittering costumes.

Mme. Rialta, a stately Spanish beauty, as a sidelight to an interesting little playlet introduced a series of beautiful poses. She was assisted by Louis La Vaille. Willard and Bond's "Battle of Bunco Hill" was one long lingering laugh.

There were a number of other interesting features. Kimberly and Hodgkins took turns at the piano and furnished some splendid entertainment. George Davis' Irish wit caught the house. Louis Stone did a novelty dance and Kelly and Lafferty, with their eccentric mannerisms and shadows, were repeatedly encored.

Karl Hewitt and company furnished an amusing comedy of domestic life. Louis Granat did some melodious whistling. Rounding out the excellent bill were a series of motion pictures that furnished comedy and pathos in abundance.

Opening Delayed.

Owing to the massiveness of the production of "The Blue Bird," this fairy fantasy by Maurice Maeterlinck will open Tuesday, October 24, at the Shubert Theatre instead of Monday, October 23. Sunday and Monday will be given over to dress rehearsals under the personal supervision of George Tyler, who is coming from New York to direct them.

Waldron's Casino.

The "Bon Ton" burlesquers began a week's engagement at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday, giving two performances. The cast was headed by Bert Baker, a comedian who proved his right to the title.

Orpheum Theatre.

The Four Musical Cates captured first honors at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday, where a new program of vaudeville and pictures was given. This musical act revealed Walter Cate as a soloist on the largest saxophone in the world. A half dozen other features completed the vaudeville section of the bill.

Hub Theatre.

Besides a number of new vaudeville features there was an interesting list of motion picture subjects at the Hub Theatre yesterday.

Scenic Temple.

New vaudeville and pictures made up the bill at the Scenic Temple yesterday. Several attractive novelties were presented.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Cherry Blossom" burlesquers were the attraction at the Old Howard yesterday and it is a matter of record that everybody in the two big audiences was satisfied with the entertainment. There were girls in great numbers and several lively vaudeville features.

New Apollo Theatre.

A lively entertainment of pictures and vaudeville was presented at the New Apollo Theatre yesterday. The bill was made up of attractive novelties of many kinds and the motion picture program contained many interesting subjects.

South End Theatre.

Emmett Corrigan's "Card Party" was the chief attraction in the new bill at the South End Theatre yesterday. It was easily the hit of the show, although the other numbers found favor with the audiences. A new list of motion pictures was also presented.

Coronation Pictures.

For ten weeks the wonderful coronation pictures have been drawing big audiences to the Tremont Temple, and the eleventh week, which began yesterday, found no lessening in the public interest. Eugene Farnsworth's descriptive lecture adds much to the entertainment. The pictures are marvels of photography.

Austin & Stone's.

The big feature of the program at Austin & Stone's Museum yesterday was the animal fight that kept everybody in the curio hall excited. A new vaudeville show was given in the theatre.

Plays That Hold Over.

Valeska Suratt began her final week at the Hollis in "The Red Rose" last evening.

The two weeks of "The Red Widow" at the Colonial Theatre were begun last evening.

"The Gamblers" continues at the Majestic Theatre. It is a powerful play of high finance.

"Excuse Me" entered upon its farewell week at the Tremont Theatre last evening.

The fourth week of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," at the Park Theatre, was begun last evening.

Lauder Coming.

Harry Lauder will be the attraction at the Boston Opera House next Friday and Saturday, giving two performances each day. In addition to Mr. Lauder will be a supplementary entertainment by a number of well-known players, including Travato, an importation.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCK PRICES CLOSE STRONG

STATE STREET, Oct. 17.—Closing—Stock market prices closed strong and somewhat buoyant at about the highest of the day. All of the leading issues participated in the advance, although it was on a minimum amount of trading. Net changes from last night, however, were slight with the exception of a few stocks like Union Pacific and Norfolk & Western.

The early part of the day brought a declining list of stock market prices under the leadership of Steel common. The price of this specialty fell 1⅝ points on some unfounded report that the government would file a suit against this company this afternoon. Attorney-General Wickersham is in the West, so that this report was soon run down. A more plausible reason for the weakness is the reduction in steel plate and the lack of profitable business.

St. Paul was also notably weak, breaking 1½ points this forenoon. Both this stock and Steel, according to the professional element, are a sale all the time. On the other hand the tip was put out that Western Maryland and American Beet Sugar are purchases no matter what the balance of the list does.

Locally, the copper share list showed some heaviness, which reflected the weakness in New York. Indiana Mining was the specially weak feature, breaking 1⅝ points to 5⅝. This was due to the levying of a $1.50 per share assessment by this company to-day, payable November 1 to stock of record October 31. This will make a total of $9.50 per share paid in.

It is argued that the technical position of the general stock market is stronger by reason of the prolonged liquidation, although at the present time the bearish feeling is intensified by an interview given to-day by Special Assistant Attorney-General McReynolds of New York that the proposed American Tobacco plan of disintegration is a plain subterfuge which deserves an expeditious commitment to the scrap heap.

The market opened irregular with Lehigh Valley the principal feature. The price rose to above 164, which established itself at a level of over 2 points above Union Pacific. Both pay 10 per cent. dividend rates. Northwest was second to Lehigh Valley in its display of firmness.

Steel shares were heavy from the start and heaviness increased until the early part of the afternoon, when the market turned on short covering and professional buying for a turn. Tobacco stock was weak on the curb, selling at 400 the early part of the day. Tonopah was the curb feature with a sharp rise.

DON'T PULL OUT THE GRAY HAIRS, OLD FASHIONED REMEDY RESTORES COLOR.

"Pull out one gray hair and a dozen will take its place," is an old saying, which is, to a great extent, true, if no steps are taken to stop the cause. When gray hairs appear it is a sign that Nature needs assistance. It is Nature's call for help. Gray hair, dull, lifeless hair, or hair that is falling out, is not necessarily a sign of advancing age, for there are thousands of elderly people with perfect heads of hair without a single streak of gray.

When gray hairs come, or when the hair seems to be lifeless or dead, some good, reliable hair-restoring treatment should be resorted to at once. Specialists say that one of the best preparations to use is the old-fashioned "sage tea" which our grandparents used. The best preparation of this kind is Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of domestic sage and sulphur, scientifically compounded with later discovered hair tonics and stimulants, the whole mixture being carefully balanced and tested by experts.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It refreshes dry, parched hair, removes dandruff and gradually restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.

Don't delay another minute. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur at once and see what a difference a few days' treatment will make in your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

AT THE OLD HOWARD THIS WEEK
RIPE

"They look ripe to me"; that's the enunciation voiced by Jack Perry as he looks over his Cherry Blossom Burlesquers who will blossom forth this week at the Howard. The kind you like to see—the picking is good—every girly is all to the choiceness. Hear Jack Perry in his Hobo Stunt—it's the acme of trampology. Always something doing from 1 till 11 at the Old Howard.

CHERRY BLOSSOM BURLESQUERS

The Baseball Craze. Don't Be Too Much Interested in What Others Do

A Man with His Mind Concentrated Upon the Work of Another Has Little Mind Left for His Own Work—A Baseball Book by William F. Kirk.

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Two sets of baseball players, each set champion in its own league, compete now for the championship of championships.

For those upon whom baseball has not fastened its hold, it is impossible to realize the intense, almost frantic, interest of millions of Americans in the baseball game.

Forty thousand human beings squeezed in to the first game and howled and cheered. Thirty thousand more saw the second.

Millions of men and boys watched the bulletin boards and eagerly studied reports of the game.

The interest is so great that this newspaper, arranging for news distribution as the public requires it, each day has printed tens of thousands of copies with the full correct score up to the last run, and full details of the early part of the game within a few minutes after the game was over.

These fanatics are not baseball players essentially. Many of them never played baseball. Many have not played for many years, and never could have played the game as it is played to-day.

The excitement in America over baseball is similar in character to the excitement in Spain over the bullfight, in the Argentine over the game "Pelota."

It is not agreeable to throw cold water on any kind of enthusiasm. But the AMERICAN wants to remind YOUNG men especially that it is extremely harmful to concentrate interest ON SOMETHING THAT SOME OTHER MAN IS DOING.

It is all very well for a baseball pitcher or catcher to concentrate every ounce of energy on the achievement of some baseball deed.

For that achievement means his success.

But when young men put their minds day after day on the minute details of a baseball game, worrying over the failure of this player, wildly enthusiastic over the success of another, that is a very bad thing for the youth commonly known as a "baseball fan."

If you are one of the hundreds of thousands of baseball maniacs remember this:

It is quite likely that twenty years hence you will be one of the average failures.

And it is quite likely that some young man of your own age very near you at this moment will be one of the exceptional successes.

You will be one of the average failures, because you will have devoted your most intense concentration, attention and interest to baseball or something else THAT CANNOT HELP YOU.

And the young man near you, no better equipped than you for success, perhaps, will pass you in the race because at this moment, while YOU are thinking and yelling about the "national series," HE IS THINKING, STUDYING AND CONCENTRATING UPON SOMETHING THAT WILL BE OF VALUE TO HIM AND CONTRIBUTE TO HIS SUCCESS TWENTY YEARS FROM NOW.

No young man can do TWO things at a time with ALL of his energy. You cannot be a baseball fan with all of your energy and at the same time be something else.

No man ever made his real success unless the most intense interest that he had in life was concentrated upon that success. Don't deceive yourself with the idea that you attend to your work very well and that the wild baseball enthusiasm does no harm. The baseball mania gets your REAL concentration, and your work gets what is left, which is not much.

A book on baseball, containing extremely good, serious sermons, and also extremely funny, humorous sermons, has been written by William F. Kirk and is published by the George W. Dillingham Company. It is called "Right Off the Bat."

We shall quote below some lines from this book, each a part of one of the poems that Mr. Kirk has collected.

Mr. Kirk looks at baseball in the right way, as one of the small things in life, one of those which may supply a sermon or a joke, and then be forgotten.

If you can learn to look at baseball in the same way, if you can transfer to your own work, to your own acts and efforts each day the intense concentration and interest which you now devote to the baseball game, to the names, acts and efforts of professional baseball players, your chance of success in life will be improved.

Meanwhile read these verses of Mr. Kirk's, two of them taken from "John Bourbon, Pitcher," and the remaining two from "The Pitcher's Soliloquy." They are worth learning by heart:

RIGHT OFF THE BAT.

JOHN BOURBON, Pitcher.

They tell me Matty can pitch like a fiend;
But many long years before Matty was weaned
I was pitching to players, and good players, too—
Mike Kelly and Rusie and all the old crew,
Red Sockalexis, the Indian star,
Breitenstein, Clancy, McGill and McGarr.
Matty a pitcher? Well, yes, he may be,
But where in the world is a pitcher like me?

My name is John Bourbon, I'm old and yet young;
I cannot keep track of the victims I've stung.
I've studied their weaknesses, humored their whims,
Muddled their eyesight and weakened their limbs,
Bloated their faces and dammed up their veins,
Rusted their joints and beclouded their brains.
Matty a pitcher? Well, yes, he may be,
But where in the world is a pitcher like me?

THE PITCHER'S SOLILOQUY.

"Young man, you are climbing the ladder now—
Your arm is as firm as steel;
The wreath of laurel is on your brow
And the pride of a prince you feel.
Do you think you will play when your hair turns gray?
I thought my prowess would last;
But you can't strike out men of to-day
With the curves you threw in the past!"

In the merciless baseball game of life
We may shine for a fleeting hour,
But the strongest frame comes to shun the strife
And loses its youthful power.
So strive to lay, while it comes your way,
A fence for Adversity's blast.
You can't strike out the men of to-day
With the curves you threw in the past.

A Good Public Servant Retained

The reappointment of Tax Commissioner Trefry means that a worthy public servant continues in office.

Mr. Trefry has held a place beset with difficulties, but he has done his best as he was given to see it, and that was doing much under the circumstances. If men have been dodging their taxes in this State, it has not been his fault. Give him power enough and he will collect all that is due from every source.

In a quiet, mild-mannered way, Mr. Trefry has uncovered and saved to the State many thousands of dollars in taxes.

THE WAY TO WIN IN THE WORLD

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

©ROCKWOOD

No one who has any heart at all can live at a time when there are so many disappointed people—so many who are desirous of doing so much more in the world than they seem to have the means of fitting themselves to do—without longing to render to some member or members of this numerous class some deed of substantial assistance or some word of serviceable suggestion.

The bread and butter necessities of life are so urgent that many a youth and young girl who would like to better their chances for a successful life by a thorough training find themselves compelled to engage in some remunerative occupation before having attained to more than the barest beginnings of an education.

In consequence of this they enter life handicapped and very likely will never lift the mortgage that embarrassing circumstances have fastened upon them.

Now, it is for just those people that I want to offer a suggestion, for they are too valuable not to have the opportunity afforded them of accomplishing that for which they have an ambition, and for which, presumably, they have the native ability.

What One Must Do to Make a Success

There is no denying that brains are the prime means of achieving what is ordinarily called success. Mind will usually win in the long run. So that if such learning as one gets at school were the only means of developing the mind then those who are compelled to discontinue prematurely their attendance at school would have a very poor show.

The best thing that school can do for a body or girl does not consist in filling the mind with a mass of information about arithmetic, grammar, history or anything else that is set down in the usual school curiculum. Those matters are well enough in their way; but one may load up his mind with a great lot of matter and still be merely a fool-graduate when he is through.

It all hinges upon whether one is a clear, strong thinker, and whether he has acquired the brain power that will enable him to do, in a mighty kind of way, what is given him to do, and to fill to the full, and to the running-over full, any position, however small, into which at the outset he may happen to be put.

What I want, then, to suggest is that if one has not had fair opportunity for the ordinary kind of schooling he is not at all shut up to the necessity of being a failure in the world.

There have been men and women that have scarcely, if at all, seen the inside of a schoolroom, who have, nevertheless, been just as brilliant successes as any that have received a full common school, high school and college education; and one of the ways by which they have done it has been to treat their occupation as a means of training instead of regarding it merely as a means of getting a living.

A Man May Let His Work Teach Him How

A man is taught and made intellectually strong by the work he does, if he will let the meaning of his work tell back upon his own powers of understanding instead of looking upon that work only as a drudgery to be gotten through with at the earliest moment possible.

An inexperienced boy may go into an office, for example, or into a store, and he may do what he is set to do merely as a matter of routine chore, or he may use his position as a means of getting into touch with the business that is being transacted in the office or store.

He will get just as close to things, as close to the stimulating and educating significance of all which the concern that hires him stands for, as he has the inclination and solid ambition to do. That is why some boys who start at the bottom grow toward the top. They think of something besides their fifty cents pay and getting through with their work at the quickest moment.

I could give interesting examples of this—names and dates. They became qualified and educated by their interested contact with large things that are going on and by studying into the meaning and scope of those large things.

By getting within reach of what is a little bigger than the small duties that they are paid fifty cents a day for doing they grow to the size of what they become interested in and master of, and so climb up the scale of competency and so of opportunity.

World Big School Where Apt Scholar Wins.

A school room is sometimes a very small and stuffy place. Intelligence has been stifled there as well as developed. But the world is a big room surrounded by a vast horizon, and any man or boy that will stand forth in the midst of it, with eyes open, hand stretched out, ready to grip hold of whatever offers and to fling himself at it for all he is worth, will find himself becoming as large as the service he renders.

This world is a storehouse full of rich commodities; but they have to be earned, and there is no use in hanging round the counter unless we are ready to lay down the cash.

Be thou the rainbow to the storms of life,
The evening beam that smiles the clouds away,
And tints to-morrow with prophetic ray!

—BYRON.

Children of the Clock

By PERCY SHAW

A GROUP of laborers was filling in a street trench; half a dozen loaded shovels were poised in air when the noon whistle blew. All but one man dropped the dirt back on the pile. The other five were young, but they might as well have been centenarians, for they will be shovelling dirt till they die. Which is another way of saying that discriminating nature has provided plenty of room at the bottom to accommodate her children of the clock.

Nature never makes a mistake, and therein she differs from the thinking creatures she creates. She regulates her multi-trillions of unthinking animals and plant families with nicest precision; she colors each flower for a distinct purpose; she fashions her legion of insects that they may better attain their fore-ordained goal in her general scheme; with all-seeing eye she watches the course of the ant in the formicary with the same patience that she supervises the titanic upheavals on our shrinking sun.

But, having bestowed upon us the unique gift of reason, she leaves us to determine when, where and how we shall sow and reap.

Therefore, when at the sound of the whistle you see a man dropping his shovelful of work back on the pile of things undone, you may set him down as one of the children of the clock.

Lawyer, doctor, minister, anything you will, if he is a child of the clock, he will tell you he is not appreciated even as he is being swept away to the meadows of opportunity lost.

Time was when pioneers in new paths faced the scoffings of an intolerant world. Galileo braved the inquisition to maintain a truth; Socrates drank the fatal hemlock with a smile; the names of the martyrs are legion, likewise their fame is undying, but they were never children of the clock.

Fortunately in these enlightened days things worth while are not long passed by. Education has begotten discrimination; the benefactor of the race, be his service great or small, is sure of a present reward.

Of twenty-two of our railroad presidents, seventeen battled their way to the top from telegraph key, coal yard and way station; behind they left an army of associates equally poor with them when the march began.

The ladder of success, like other ladders, narrows rapidly at the top. Those who stepped off the lower rungs when the whistle blew could never attain the skill needed to balance on the top rung with nothing to support them. The envious voice of this great army will tell you why they did not get there. Is it strange that you are not interested? What thrills you is the story of the heroes who did.

Paradoxical as it may sound, sympathy belongs with the man on the heights. The children of the clock are sufficient unto themselves.
